

MARS HILL HONORS MEMORY OF SLAVE

 large number of visitors present for the day, gathered in a natural amphitheatre on the campus where the ashes of Joe had been reinterred and where a granite marker had been erected to his memory.
 At the beginning of the unveiling ceremony, J. Bascom Huff, of the English department of Mars Hill college and the grandson of Edward Carter, on whose land the first buildings of the college were erected, presented the living descendants of Joe who were present. The granite marker, the gift of C. M. Palmer of the Palmer Stone Works of Albemarle, N. C., was unveiled by little Miss Ruth Carter Tilson and Master Edward Poole, great-grand grandchildren of Edward Carter. The memorial bears the inscription "In memory of Joe, a slave who was taken by the contractors of the first building of this college as a pledge for the debt due them, 1856."
 Joe, believed to be the only human being who was ever actually taken to help pay for a college, has become a symbol at Mars Hill of the human values which have gone into the founding and maintenance of the college, and the story of his incarceration has become a campus legend.
 When the first buildings of the college were erected in 1856 something like $1200 were due the contractors, Shackelford and Clayton, of Asheville. The local people who desired a college in the vicinity had they thought, to their limit, land being plentiful but money exceedingly scarce in this mountain region at the time. The contractors accordingly levied on a negro youth, Joe, belonging to J. W. Anderson, chairman of the board of trustees, taking him to Asheville, eighteen miles away. Because Joe was a favorite in the community or because they did not want Mr. Anderson to bear all the debt, the members of the board each assumed a share of the indebtedness and finally redeemed Joe, who lived the remainder of his days in the community. This summer his ashes were removed from a nearby cemetery to a site on the campus where a marker has been placed in his memory.

FOUR AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED UPON IN NORTH CAROLINA

 The entire state vote counts, not merely the district vote in which the judge resides and from which he is elected. But if this change is made, then the majority party can so gerrymander districts that the majority party can always elect their solicitors. In some instances now, a solicitor is elected in a district by the opposite party, but if this change is made, then the counties can be so arranged that it will be impossible for any but one party to elect a solicitor.

SAYS DEMOCRACY TO CONSUME ITSELF IF COURSE IS PURSUED

 and this year the income will hardly exceed 55 billions, of which 20 per cent will go for taxes.
 "When one considers this tremendous increase in the cost of government, especially in the light of our present economic situation, he wonders if the predictions of such great students of democracy as Macaulay, Spencer and Voltaire, that democracy would 'consume itself' in many activities and their resultant costs, may come to pass. That is our trouble, too many unnecessary and costly governmental functions.
 "We hear a great deal about government being responsive to the will of the people. Well, when government takes from us $1 out of every $5 we earn for the payment of taxes, it is time for thinking people everywhere to assert themselves and demand that government give up some of its activities and materially reduce the present confiscatory tax levy. When that is done, conditions will improve not before."
