

GOVERNORS VISIT STONE MOUNTAIN

South Pays Homage to Lee's Memory at Unveiling of Great Monument at Stone Mountain Saturday.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 19.—The South today paid homage to the memory of General Robert E. Lee.

Governors of Southern States, Confederate Veterans and men and women high in rank in national and state affairs, stood with bowed heads as tons of granite crashed down the precipice of Stone Mountain, leaving on a 30-foot square, the head of the South's greatest general standing out in relief, carved in native rock.

As the granite tumbled its way from the working platform to the ground below, two American flags, covering Lee's features, were drawn aside as Mrs. C. Helen Plane, 94 years old, widow of a Confederate colonel who died in battle, and a charter member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, commanded Stone Mountain to give forth the head of Lee, commander-in-chief of the armies of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Plane wore the costume of the 60's and was accompanied by 13 boys and 13 girls, children of the Confederacy. Mrs. Plane, through her children, distributed in the audience ships of the granite last cut from the head of Lee and preserved by the sculptor, Gutzon Borglum, who began his work on December 1st.

Confederate Veterans were given the place of honor immediately surrounding the rostrum upon which were the sculptor, visiting governors, representatives of the United States army and navy, United Daughters of the Confederacy, the United Confederate Veterans and other national, state and city officials.

Lee's head is the first unit of what is destined to be one of the world's greatest monuments. Cut in living stone, the head of General Lee is the central figure about which will be carved a panoramic view of Dixie's mortals as an everlasting memorial to those who died for the Confederate cause.

FELT TIRED, SO TIRED

Indiana Lady Says She Was Run- Down, Suffered With Her Back, Took Cardui, and Got Well.

Richmond, Ind.—"I thought I would write a line or so, to say that I owe my good health and strength to Cardui," says a letter from Mrs. Cora Courtney, 31 Railroad Street, this city.

"I was all run-down until my family thought they would lose me," writes Mrs. Courtney. "My husband coaxed me to take Cardui, so, to please him, I did, and will say I do not regret it, for I am able to do all my work and do my shopping."

"I have five children, four in school, my husband and a boarder to do for, and I do all my own work for all of us, and find time to play. We all praise Cardui. Every sick and run-down woman should take this wonderful medicine."

"I suffered with my back; a very weak feeling in my limbs."

"I felt hardly able to drag; just tired—so tired all the time."

"It was an effort for me to do anything, but Cardui helped me so I felt like a different woman."

If you are in a run-down physical condition, suffering as this Indiana lady says she did, give Cardui a fair trial. It should help you.

Take Cardui.

A SUGGESTION.

The art of specializing is typically American. It has been tested out for years, and without doubt works for the highest efficiency. In the poultry world we are coming more and more to realize the value of specialization.

On the large poultry farms where 20,000 to 50,000 birds are grown there are specialists in each department, whose duty is to attend strictly to his particular branch of the industry. This calls for high salaried men and only wealthy breeders can afford this class of helpers. But by co-operation a community of people, usually embracing a county and the outlying communities to this county can organize a co-operative poultry colony, each individual member of which prepares himself for his own particular part of the work. In this way a district may become a large egg factory with each poultryman head of his own department. By concentrating his mind on one phase of the work he can be much more successful than if all the stages of breeding, brooding, caring for young stock and marketing his eggs were undertaken.

For example, if you want to sell market eggs you build and equip a good laying house. You buy your pullets just coming into laying and begin at once to realize on your investment. You keep no males, so that every bite of feed is used by a producer. If a well-balanced ration is given and with good care of your stock you will realize a larger percent on your investment than you can on any other farm product. By working co-operatively this will become a cash crop.

An outline of the work done in Petaluma, California, which by the way is the most successful poultry colony in the world, may be of help to us here. There is one group of men who are breeders, another who take the day-old chicks and carry them up to the laying period. They are then placed in laying houses by the commercial egg farmer.

This first group breed for vitality, standard points, and high egg production. This is the work which carries the greatest responsibility.

The eggs are then bought from the approved breeders by the hatchery. These men devote their lives to hatching eggs and nothing else.

They sell the day-old chicks to another group of experts who brood and care for them on open range until they are ready to place in the laying houses.

Then comes the real poultry man who places these strong, healthy pullets in their laying houses, giving them scientific care and feeds. Each day he carries the eggs to the large packing house, where they are washed, candled, weighed, graded, placed in attractive containers and shipped to market.

The packed crate of eggs as it comes from the packing house is an attractive object, with all eggs of the same size, of the same clear, white tone, and every egg known to be good. The market price is better because of the known quality of the commodity. Each stage of the work being handled by experts, the finished article is the best of its kind that can be produced.

A close second to the poultry business and nearly allied to it is the dairy. A creamery cares for the cream and the skimmed milk or buttermilk is used by those who raise the pullets and have laying hens. The milk fed hen is not as susceptible to diseases and is by far the better producer. The milk supplies the necessary protein, too, which makes the white of the egg. Without protein in some form, either milk, meat scraps, bugs, insects, or their equivalent, the hen will not lay, no matter how good the grain ration is. A cannery which utilizes the surplus fruits and vegetables also cans the young roosters, which are not shipped to market as fryers.

This completely organized specialization of the industry at every stage, from the mother hen to the marketed egg, is the greatest factor for the success of the business, which no individual can create for himself.

In developing the industry in this way the methods of modern science, and modern business, and modern industrial procedure have simply been applied in the old way to a new object.

The citizens of Macon County are coming to realize the potential resources of their climate, their productive soil and the approach to the best markets which the building of new roads will open up. The farms of our county are capable of supplying grain and green feed with roughage for a large and wealth-producing poultry and dairy colony.

The Farm Federation is contemplating the purchase of a new mammoth incubator, to be installed this spring. We are making a sure and steady growth in all branches of farming.

The county is just now making a special drive for more poultry and eggs, more and larger dairies, and increased production of cabbage, fruit and potatoes, all five of which can be brought to their highest state of perfection right here on our own farms in the county of Macon.
