MILK PROFITS UP TO FARMER, SAYS EXPERT

Regardless of business and agricultural conditions, money can always be made from milking cows, says, Hugh G. Van Pelt, eminent dairy authority, writing in the Larro Dairyman for September.

As proof, Mr. Van Pelt states that under any conditions that can be named someone in every neighborhood always is making money from milk. The ability of the farmer and his cows, he declares, determines profits, rather than labor, overhead and feed costs.

"When it seems that everything I must buy is too high," says Mr. Van Pelt, "and everything I must sell is too low—and it has seemed that way now for several years—it is absolutely necessary to remind myself that the profit that comes from milking cows is based more upon largeness and economy of production than upon any other factor."

Mr. Van Pelt declares that the worse general conditions become the more farmers must depend upon their ability to feed and care for cows so as to obtain large and economical production. Only by doing this, he says, can dairymen hope to be classed among those who make money from milk instead of those who lose money.

When milk and butter fat prices are high and labor and feed is cheap, says this expert, it is easy for any farmer to make money milking cows, provided good cows are properly milked and are well fed and cared for.

The real test, he declares, comes when conditions are adverse—when milk and butter fat prices are low and labor and feed are expensive. The point which he insists must be driven home to farmers is that even under these conditions it is possible for dairymen to make money from milk from good cows, which cannot fail to be profit makers if sufficient intelligence and care is used in feeding and milking.

Besides being a nationally known authority as a writer on dairy subjects, Mr. Van Pelt is president of the Waterloo Jersey Farm, and a large operator himself in blooded cattle and dairy products.

GREATEST YEAR FOR MEAT SEEN BY BOARD

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 23.—Meat consumption per person in the United States this year promises to equal or even surpass the record figure of 1908 which stands out as the highest mark since the establishment of Federal Meat Inspection in 1907, according to a statement by D. A. Millett, newly elected chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

In his statement made public today following the annual meeting here of the National Board, Mr. Millett said that Government estimates now available for the first four months of this year show an upward trend over the corresponding four months of last year. In 1923 the figures for these months were 35.5 lbs., while this year they are 36.7 lbs. He pointed out that the high mark was reached in 1908 when per capita consumption for the entire year was 170.9 lbs. A sharp decline followed for several years due to steadily increasing population coupled with abnormal conditions incident to the World War. However, he called attention to the fact that 1923 resulted in a pronounced advance with a per capita consumption for the entire year of 167.0 lbs. This figure set a record for the past fifteen years, or those years following 1908 and indicated, in his opinion, that the American people had definitely turned to a larger use of meat in the diet.

"The remarkable health and vitality of our nation together with per capita meat consumption figures are significant facts to be seriously considered," said the Board's chairman. "We are known as one of the greatest meat eating nations and our health and energy are unsurpassed."

IN MEMORY OF MR. J. F. BROWN

Dear grandfather has gone to mansions above,
Prepared by Jesus for all His loved ones
In heaven he is sleeping, while on earth we are weeping.
We miss him more than ever before
And since he's gone we are sad and alone.
We know he can never come back,
For he's been walking in Jesus' tracks,
And is now in heaven at rest,
With all the redeemed and blest.
We miss him so, but we all want to go.
He is now walking the golden streets with Jesus so sweet.
He repeated the name of the Lord over and over,
And said he had a better home up yonder.
He left this world of shame into heaven's fame,
And waiting and watching for us to come.
Dear grandfather prayed to die,
And that the Lord's will be done on high.
We should have no fear, and try to live with God so dear.
We loved him, but God loved best,
And called him home to heavenly rest.

NO MORE FOOLING

Nowhere did Abraham Lincoln show his shrewdness of judgment better than in that famous utterance which ended, "You can't fool all the people all the time."

In the past, there were a few misguided advertisers who thought they could sell their wares better by misrepresentation. But those advertisers have long since gone out of business or mended their ways. Hard experience taught that Lincoln was right. Untruthful advertising doesn't pay.

Other advertisers proved that the only way to advertise successfully, make regular customers and build up public good-will was to tell the absolute truth about their goods.

So, you can be sure that every consistently advertised product is good. The advertising test has proved it. The very fact that it is advertised is your best warranty of satisfaction and true quality.

The concern that tells you frankly what it is doing is a good concern with which to do business. That is why it pays to read the advertisements, to patronize advertisers, and to buy advertised merchandise.

SPHINX
One of the charming members of Sphinx family, R. F. D., the Sahara desert, was a sea monster whose favorite pastime was asking riddles. Stupid people who couldn't guess the answers were murdered without compunction. Oedipus solved the riddle and the disgruntled Sphinx took her own life. "Sphinx" is applied to a human being who possesses elements of mystery and is more or less of an enigma.
