Building Program Is Announced By Church

Rev. B. S. Hensley, pastor of Scott's Creek Baptist church, one of the largest charges in Jackson county, has just announced plans for building a brick veneer educational building as an adjunct to the church structure.

Ground will be broken, said the minister, within the next few weeks for this supplement to the already impressive plant, situated about two miles from Sylva, just off the Waynesville highway.

The church officials were fortunate in securing, before priority restrictions, enough material to proceed with what is intended as only a beginning for betterment of the entire physical unit.

After a pastorate of slightly over two years, Mr. Hensley describes progress at Scott's Creek as indicative of a live membership which advances even amid war-time handicaps.

Selective service has taken 75 to 80 members, to say nothing of defense workers, Mr. Hensley pointed out, adding that today his charge has the only standard Sunday school of all the 44 Baptist churches in the county.

In alluding to future programs the minister stressed the remarkable activity of this department, stating that the spiritual effectiveness of any church is readily appraised by the quality of its Sunday school.

He cited the fact that with approximately 450 communicants, there are 275 Sunday school attendants, an increase within the past two years of about 165. The adult classes give special satisfaction, as they show an impressive percentage of young married couples whose enthusiasm he described as most inspiring.

Quite recently the church began operation with Mr. Hensley as full-time pastor—this a direct outgrowth of increase both numerical and spiritual, he explained. There are now weekly Sunday School teachers' meetings, while the Baptist Training Union, at present numbering 90, a department originally designed for young folk but later opened to all ages, is in particularly flourishing condition.

The Sunday school is in charge of Jennings A. Bryson, superintendent, with Clyde Fiske as assistant. The church pianist is Mrs. Hoyt Parris, while Roy Dalton is B. T. U. director. Mrs. Margie Reed and Mrs. Joe Sutton are heads respectively of the two missionary circles. Mrs. W. C. Cox being counselor of Young Women's Auxiliary. The choir is under direction of Eugene Fisher.

Head of Girls' Auxiliary is Mrs. Joe Sutton, Mrs. Garland Dillard being leader of the Sunbeams. Chairman of the board of deacons is D. G. Bryson and Everett Harris is church treasurer; Mrs. George Snyder, church clerk.

Meeting hours are: Sunday school, 10:30 a. m.; church, 11:30. Evening services are at 7:15 for the B. T. U.; church at 8:15.

The church building, situated on spacious grounds with a beautiful well tended lawn, where outdoor events are held, is 70 years old, the minister said.

However, the congregational organization at Scott's Creek boasts an age of 110, Mr. Hensley said, with a history and traditions impelling the interest of Jackson county and beyond.

Floridian Back After 44 Years To Make This His Permanent Home

W. S. Maxwell came to Sylva 44 years ago, just after the Spanish American War. As a result of that visit he is back here today looking for a home. John R. Jones, local real estate man, and alert chamber of commerce secretary, last Wednesday escorted Mr. Maxwell into the Herald office with the welcome announcement that Mr. Maxwell will probably become a resident for at least the major part of each year, as a place has been found, which seems to fill the bill admirably.

Mr. Maxwell, who in his own words, "fell in love with Sylva," before the town of the present century, expects to take up official residence here, though his Florida interests will continue to demand his attention for a number of months each year.

"Yes, I fell in love with Sylva," said Mr. Maxwell, "it's been a long time ago, we had just ended the Spanish war. Think of the changes in the world since then, but one thing has never changed—my recollection of this lovely mountain town with people so hospitable, courteous and helpful, they have been remembered all these years."

Mr. Maxwell has been in Western North Carolina many times since his first visit; has been near Sylva; has passed through, but circumstances prevented him from stopping until September, 1943.

He declares that he finds the same Sylva spirit the same delightful hospitality, the same desire to be helpful.

Mr. Maxwell, whose hobby is gardening, plans to give that a major part of his time here. With a twinkle in his eye he said that his neighbors in Florida could seldom beat him in vegetable growing. That friendly competition would be a welcome in the mountain home.

Jackson county has invested about $50,000 in war bonds this month against the quota of $124,000, it was announced yesterday at noon by R. L. Aerial, permanent chairman of the Jackson County War Finance Committee.

The Third War Loan drive started last Thursday, and interest is growing in the campaign, as the Jackson county war bond committee determines to reach the quota.

Mr. Aerial spent Monday in the county, visiting schools and working with teachers in getting the students interested in buying and selling bonds and stamps.

Mr. Aerial has offered prizes in bonds to the Jackson school student who sells the most in bonds and stamps, and also the second highest. Another cash prize is offered the school selling the largest number of bonds and stamps. The winner will be determined on a pro-rata basis, using the school enrollment as the working basis.

The churches of the county have been asked by Mr. Aerial to give special recognition to the campaign during the month at some service. The schools throughout the county will have special programs emphasizing the importance of investing in bonds and stamps.

"Only 13 days remain for us to invest $74,000 in bonds in order to reach our goal," Mr. Aerial stated yesterday. "It is important and essential that every citizen of Jackson county renew their efforts, and do just a little more in order that we attain our goal."

There are four disbursing agents in the county. The Jackson County Bank, The Sylva Post Office, The Cullowhee Post Office and the Post Office at Cashiers.
