A Merited Award

The Herald extends congratuuations to Jennings Bryson and Venoy Reed, owners and operators of The Jackson County Transit Company, on being accepted into membership of North Carolina Motor Carriers Association. They merited this membership by not having had an accident during their period of carrying passengers since establishing their company in the fall of 1945, and having traveled over 140,000 miles during this time.

The School Bond Issue Again

During the past several months we have written a number of editorials giving our views on the proposed school bond election, and endeavoring to point out why the citizens of Jackson county cannot afford to do less than vote in favor of the bond issue in the July 3rd bond election.

We again want to urge our fellow citizens to support the bond issue by voting in favor of it and by urging friends and neighbors to do the same.

We realize as well as you that to go in debt that there will be a pay day sooner or later, that the taxpayers will have to foot the bill. We, like you, also realize that our county school situation is a desperate one, a very gloomy one in fact. You know and we know that some relief must be had if our children are to have anything like the educational advantages that children have in other parts of Western North Carolina. The only way that Jackson County can ever have this much needed relief for our schools is through the issuance of bonds. We cannot afford to raise the money need etdo do this work by direct taxation, but that is just what we are likely to have to do if the bond election fails. Our county officials will

We are very much averse to any kind of increased taxation, but when the method proposed is much the lesser of two evils then we are for the bond issue.

If the bond issue fails then, could not benefit from any State aid as she would have no funds with which to match the State's fifty per cent. This is why the citizens of Jackson County must not fail their children and the children of future generations by providing better schools through voting for the school bond issue.

"ABLE" CAIN - Senator Harry P. Cain (R), Washington, is the man principally responsible for the new rent control bill, and its "break" for tenants.

Cain, alone, withstood a last-minute attempt to weaken the 1948 rent law by giving stronger powers to the 660 local rent advisory boards which in many sections are admittedly pro-landlord.

The youngish Washington senator battled single-handed against House conferees who were determined to write local autonomy on rent boosts and decontrol actions into the law.

Can, after a bitter, two-and-one-halfhour night session with the House members on the conference committee, succeeded in winning them over to the compromise arrangement under which the United States emergency court of appeals is the final authority on area-wide rent actions.

Even the housing expediter admits that Cain did a good job.

ANTI-JIM CROW ISSUE - As the Senate gets to its much-heralded showdown on President Truman's civil rights program, trouble centers around the fact that the handling of homicide cases is in the province of the states, and some think it will be hard to establish, to the satisfaction of the Supreme Court, that a lynching is substantially different from any other homfide.

Senator James O. Eastland (D), Mississippi, leading the committee fight for the southern bloc, reportedly has won some unexpected reinforcements as a result of the constitutionality squabble.

CLAM DEVELOPMENT — Congress and in that event, the county of Jackson hit a new high in investigations when the Senate passed a bill authorizing the fish and wildlife service of the Interior department to investigate the soft shell clam industry. More than one senator, including Senators Homer E. Capehart (R), Indiana, and Henry C. Lodge (R), Massachusetts, were confused as to the purpose of the bill.

Lodge said the idea was very "appealing" while Capehart asked his New England collegue, Senator Theodore F. Green Heard Over the Coffee Cups—"And I (D), Rhode Island, to enlighten the Sen-
