Good Farm Repair Shop Saves Time And Trouble

A well-arranged, well-equipped farm repair shop which centralizes repair operations can save time and trouble and prevent accidents, M. L. Snipes, county agent for the State College Extension Service, said here this week. Now that the rush of the growing season is past, this is a good time to plan on reorganizing the farm shop, he added.

The National Safety Council suggests a farm shop to bring tools and work together, thus not only saving time but also promoting safety throughout the year. If the shop is properly designed for orderliness, good light, comfort and convenience, the work is certain to be easier and safer.

Almost any kind of farm building can be converted to serve as a shop, Mr. Snipes said. The Extension Office will be glad to give assistance to farmers desiring it.

A checklist of construction hints offered by the county agent and approved by the National Safety Council includes the following: 1. Weatherproof the shop and equip it with a heating stove. (Winter is the time for construction and repair jobs.) 2. Install large, garage-type
