LITTLE COUNTRY PAPER

I get a little paper from a little country town—
A far cry from the dailies, that on Sunday weigh us down;
It's printed every Friday, and it has no supplement,
Nor colored rotogravure, but I'm always glad it's sent.
It gives no clever verses by syndicated hard,
But states that Mrs. Williams entertained some friends at cards;
"Ye Scribe," saw Judge McArthur shaking hands with friends today
It says the Curtis family sold out and moved away.
On Boulder Dam it's silent, and there's nothing on finance—
It tells that the Rebekahs gave an installation dance.
That Miss Day is returning soon to open up her school,
That Alexander Hargrave lost a valuable mule.
It's glad that Jimmie Gallagher can be around again.
It claims that the alfalfa crop is much in need of rain;
The supervisors voted for the road work to commence;
Will Anderson hauled lumber for his new garage and fence.
The worldly ones may smile at it, but theirs are tender smiles—
These home town items form a bond through many years and miles.
Oh, little country paper, with your little weekly talks!
I like to wander with you down remembered roads and walks.

THEY KNOW WHAT THEY WANT

(Editorial in Asheville Citizen)
Certain high-browed but low spirited gentlemen are predicting that women will soon refashion society, that they will rewrite the moral code, and that they will substitute license for liberty and so wreck and abolish home life as we know it today. These results, they say, will be entirely due to the present "machine age," an era in which women, finding employment easy, make enough money to enjoy comparative luxury living alone. Being no longer dependent on man for their support, they will assert and exercise the right to do as man does.
The argument betrays a profound and depressing lack of understanding of woman nature. This "machine age," unless we are tremendously mistaken, is going to make women far more dependent on men than they are now. In its beginning it opened up employment to millions of women, who, driven by economic pressure and lured by the false dawn of a so called freedom, rushed from their homes to shop and factory. Millions of them are still in shop and factory. They will be there for a while longer.
But this same machine age, having begun by offering so much employment, will end by affording more leisure. The thing has already begun. Industrialists are talking about the five-day work week being the most productive. Henry Ford has made it a reality in his plants. And what will the men do with the extra leisure? They will do what they have always done with it. They will turn more and more to the women as companions and entertainers of this leisure.

And what will the women do? They will do what they have always done. They will insist that the world be so ordered as to afford them security, protection, privacy and a place in which to rear their children and daily recapture their men. They will demand of their own sex the strictest morality, because they know from the race's long experience how to make and keep themselves desirable, and they also will deny other women the right to steal into their homes and carry off their most valuable possessions, men.

It has always been so. It will always be so. Women as a whole do not like to work outside of their homes. They are the supreme individualists. They are for themselves. And they are immovable in their ancient conviction that the way to make their individuality the regnant power is to hold themselves high. Rewrite the moral code? Wise women laugh. It suits their purposes as it is.

THAT the progressive business concerns of a city take great pleasure in giving personal service. They know that humanizing their service will be appreciated by their customers.

THAT they believe that to have service dominate the activities of their business, the nearer they can become to being the kind of business that is indispensable and helpful to all, the nearer they will approach the ideals of their owners.

THAT their businesses, being founded upon high ideals of co-operation and service, mean great progress and development for all businesses in a city, and as business develops so will the city develop and grow.

THAT in the full spirit of service, the merchants of a progressive city are fully prepared with the newest, finest stocks of everything that can contribute to the comfort and happiness of every citizen, and they use continuous newspaper advertising so all may know.

THAT they offer good of value and service.

THAT thinking people who have an interest in the growth and progress of the home city always patronize these business concerns.

They know spending their money in the home city means much in the progressive march of both the commercial and civic life of their city.

Foreign Patents

A majority of American manufacturers and exporters pay very little attention to securing foreign patents for their products. This has prompted a warning from the Chief of the Patent and Trade Mark section of the United States Department of Commerce. He says that failure of American manufacturers and inventors to protect themselves in foreign markets has been to the great advantage of foreign manufacturers who have copied American-made goods and placed them on the market in their own names.

RECORD OF MARS HILL FOR 1928-29

The record of Mars Hill for the session of 1928-29, is on the whole a satisfactory one. There have been difficulties of discipline, of finance, of keeping well within the bounds of standards set by accrediting agencies. The way has not been smooth but it is believed that it has led upward.

The 488 enrolled came from seventy counties in this State and from twelve other states. Of this number forty-one are ministerial students, and seven volunteers for distinct Christian work on foreign fields, if God opens the way. The twelve classes that formed the College Young People's Department of the Sunday-school did fine work in enlisting the students in studying the Word and the ten B.Y.P.U.'s maintained consistently high standards. The Y.W.A. again enrolled every boarding girl.

Some progress was made in increasing the endowment. A friend in another State gave $22,000, another in this State $4,100—both modestly insisting that their names not be used. Mr. R. G. Adams, a patron, gave a deed to a 75-acre tract which is to be sold and the proceeds added to this fund. Mr. E. F. Watson of Burnsville gave $1,000 and Mr. R. R. Mallard of Chicago $1,000. Others joined in the effort with smaller sums. We are yet thousands short of the goal set. Three special funds have been started which will surely grow to worthy proportions in the years ahead—The Travelli Fund, The Landon H. Greene Fund, The Dr. Sproles Fund.

In the absence of Professor I. N. Carr who is completing work for the Doctor's degree at Duke, Professor Elliott has charge of the first term of the summer session, the present enrollment of which is 125. Professor Lee will be director of the second term, while Mr. Elliott teaches English in Western North Carolina State College.

The coming session promises well in attendance and in ability to render a little better grade of service.

Patrons Should Support Postoffice

The United States Postoffice Department ran behind $95,000,000 during the past year, and the disclosure has brought an opinion from President Hoover to the effect that the cost of the Department should be borne by the persons who receive its benefits, and not by the taxpayers of the country. Therefore it may be reasonably expected that an effort will be made to have Congress increase many of the postal rates.

A method that has served to place a tax on nearly every gallon of gasoline sold in the country ought to be effective enough to take care of a postal deficit.

SPENDS LESS FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

COMPARISON OF 1926-27 WITH 1927-28 SHOWS LESS COST FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL PURPOSES.

North Carolinians spent $1,000,000 less for their public schools in 1927-28 than they did in 1926-27, so declares State School Facts, the official publication of the State Department of Public Instruction in its current issue.

"A comparison of the two years" the publication continues "shows that in 1926-27 the total sum of $36,701,501.36 was spent for these schools, whereas during the school year 1927-28 the sum of $35,655,440.70 was expended for all public school purposes below college grade. "The explanation of the decrease" the publication states, "is the fact that more than two million dollars less were spent for capital outlay purposes—new buildings, sites, and equipment. In 1926-27 more than eleven million dollars were paid out for this class of expenditures, whereas in 1927-28 slightly more than nine million dollars were put into new buildings and school equipment.

"The year 1927-28 marks the lowest point that capital outlay expenditures have reached since 1921-22, when the cost of the new buildings erected and equipped slightly exceeded six million dollars."

On the other hand, as the publication points out, the amount of money spent for the current operation and maintenance of the schools increased one million dollars over the preceding year. It cost $26,580,686.40 to operate the elementary and secondary schools during 1927-28, whereas in 1926-27 twenty-five and a half million dollars did the job.

There is a tendency for current expense to increase from year to year, but the rate of increase this past year is the lowest within the past eight years. This million dollars represents a 4 per cent increase, whereas in 1920-21 there was a 40.8 per cent increase; in 1921-22, 15.3; in 1922-23, 11.1; in 1923-24, 10.6; in 1924-25, 10.2; in 1925-26, 8.5; and 1926-27, 12.0. The increase the past year, therefore, is less than half the percentage increase of any the preceding seven years.
