MOTHER'S DAY 50 YEARS OLD Mother's Day dates from just a few years back—1907 or 50 years ago. Yet it has already become nationally accepted and generally observed in this and other countries. Miss Anna M. Jarvis of Philadelphia persuaded one of the churches in that city to honor our mothers and asked that sons and daughters wear white carnations in honor of their mothers. This was done and soon the custom spread to all parts of the United States. Today we wear either white or red flowers on this special day depending on whether our mother is still alive. An there is little doubt that the observance of Mother's Day led later to establishment of Father's Day, which is held in June. It is proper and well to observe Mother's Day and a tradition of giving present to mothers on the second Sunday in May has become established in recent years. But observance of the day has done much good through the years. Organizations dedicated to the goal of reducing the loss of life in childbirth long used the day to stimulate thought and generate support for that cause. In 1911 Congress officially recognized Mother's Day and President Woodrow Wilson first called upon U. S. officials to display the flag in honor of the day. A mother is a common possession of all. Observance of the day knows no distinctions, no limits and no special classes. And the fact that observance of the day has grown so rapidly in this country and abroad is proof that sons and daughters, of all of us, think it only right to pay respect and do honor to the love and care and bother that once was—and usually still is—spent on us by those we remember this second Sunday in May, 1957.
