

Mars Hill Town Election Due For Lively Campaign

William Powell Opposes Dr. Bruce Sams In Mayor's Contest

One incumbent is not seeking reelection, but a lively campaign was assured Tuesday for seats on the four-member Mars Hill Town Council.

The filing deadline fell at noon. Mars Hill pharmacist William Powell will attempt to unseat Dr. Bruce Sams as mayor of the town in the May 4 election.

Incumbent Councilman Arthur Woods, an engineering teacher at Mars Hill College, is seeking reelection on Powell's slate.

Paul Tugman, a teacher in Madison County's industrial education program and an incumbent councilman, is aligned with Dr. Sams in his bid for reelection. Robert Chapman, registrar business teacher at the college, and Kenneth Anderson, a retired civil service employe, are also candidates for council seats on the ticket led by Dr. Sams, a Mars Hill dentist.

Aligned with Powell and Wood are B. W. Grigg, a retired earth-moving contractor, and Carl Eller, operator of an auto garage there and a fuel distributor.

The Mars Hill Town Council is elected on a non-partisan basis, and the mayor is elected as such on a majority vote. The three candidates for council who poll the highest number of votes, regardless of whose ticket they are on, will be declared the winner.

Dr. Sams and his ticket are generally associated with the Madison County Democratic Party, however.

Powell is a member of the so-

N. C. STATE NAME SETTLED THURS.

The long North Carolina State name change hassle was settled quickly Thursday when the General Assembly voted to call the school North Carolina State University at Raleigh.

The issue was settled in favor of alumni forces who claim the present name — North Carolina State of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh — is unwieldy and embarrassing.

The Senate voted overwhelmingly in favor of the measure without any dissenting debate. The bill then was rushed to the House where rules were suspended and it was enacted.

The case with which the bill passed the Senate, where its strongest opposition was centered, was that the name had been settled off the floor.

The upper house first went through the formalities of adopting a bill which came from Sen. Ralph Scott's Higher Education Committee to name the UNC branch North Carolina University at Raleigh.

Sen. Sam Whitehurst of Craven then offered amendments to the bill which came out of Scott's subcommittee. The amendments substituted North Carolina State University at Raleigh for North Carolina University at Raleigh throughout the bill.

No one spoke against Whitehurst's proposals and it passed by a strong voice vote.

'65 FEED GRAIN PROGRAM

Nearly one and one-half million farmers have signed up to participate in the voluntary 1965 feed grain program, USDA has announced. On basis of preliminary final returns from states, three major new records have been established.

Signed up are 1,482,583 farmers who intend to divert 36,576,800 acres from feed grain production, or 42 percent of base of 86,627,300 acres. The 86.6 million acres of base acreage on enrolled farms represents 65 percent of total on all farms in United States.

The 1965 signup exceeds previous feed grain program high points by these amounts: 11 percent greater than the 1962 enrollment of 1,337,182; 7 percent higher than the 1964 agreed diversion of 84,312,100 acres, and 12 percent higher than 77,502,900 acres of feed grain base on enrolled farms in 1964.

A record number of North Carolina farmers signed up in the 1965 feed grain program. A total of 64,205 farmers signed up to divert 709,355 acres from production of feed grains this year. This is the largest number of farms and the largest acreage that has been signed since the program began in 1961. The previous high was in 1962 when 63,421 farmers signed up to divert 682,751 acres from production.

Decision Is Expected Soon; Hotly Contested Arguments

By DOUG REED Citizen Staff Writer

Raleigh — A compromise settlement of the hotly-disputed one-man jury commission system in Madison County appeared to be shaping up here Thursday.

The possibility arose during, and after, a torrid 75-minute debate on a bill introduced by Sen. Clyde M. Norton of Old Fort to abolish the one-man system.

Verbal exchanges over the bill came at a meeting of the House Local Government Committee which, for all practical purposes, became a full-scale public hearing.

There were these developments pointing toward a possible solution to the impasse between rival political factions:

The bill was sent to a subcommittee after Rep. Lacy H. Thornburge of Jackson County suggested such a procedure might be helpful in producing a proposal satisfactory to both sides.

Superior Court Judge Frank Huskins of Burnsville, who under present law appoints the Madison jury commissioner, said in Charlotte he felt all counties, including Madison, could have a higher quality of jurors if they had a three-man jury commission with not more than two of its members from the same political party.

Madison Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Liston B. Ramsey said if Norton's bill had specified a commission of three people "appointed by the resident judge, we'd have no opposition to that."

Norton's bill already passed by the Senate, would bring Madison under general statutes which provide for the county commissioners to act as a three-man jury commission. At present, this would mean Madison's three Republican county commissioners would replace the Democratic jury commissioner appointed by the judge.

Madison has had a one-man commission since 1955 by special act.

Judge Huskins' name was mentioned in the dispute publicly for the first time Thursday. Rep. Paul Story of McDowell, speaking for the bill, said Huskins had authorized him to quote him "as saying he doesn't like one-man jury commissions and that he would prefer a commission of three to five persons representative of both parties."

Judge Huskins was contacted by the Citizen in Charlotte later Thursday and asked if this meant he favored Sen. Norton's bill. Huskins said it did not. "While I don't covet the appointive authority, nevertheless I do not think the bill improves anything in Madison County," he said. (Continued To Last Page)

SLUGS, SNAILS ARE DAMAGING TO TOBACCO

Silver Suggests Methods Of Control To Farmers

Tobacco and, in a few instances, tomato plant beds are being injured or destroyed by slugs, locally referred to as snails. The slugs live in vegetation such as honeysuckle vines, heavy weeds or other plant growth and in rock walls, slab piles, etc. At night and on cloudy days, particularly when it is wet, these slugs come out and feed. They seem to prefer young, tender plants such as tobacco and tomato plants. They can destroy a plant bed in two or three nights.

There are several suggested methods of control for slugs and snails. The most effective system is
