had indeed risen from the dead. Charged first by the Angel, and later by Jesus, to carry the good word to his disciples, the two women sped on their way with the glad tidings.

Downcast, bewildered by the death of their leader, the disciples were in a state of confusion and hopelessness. They felt great sorrow at the loss of a very dear friend; but they felt, somewhat, that Jesus had failed. Their faith was faltering. This should be understandable, for, although all the miracles that were wrought in the life of Jesus had their own great and individual significance, the Resurrection was the greatest of them all.

Jesus had publicly staked his all on the fact that he would be reborn. If he was not, therefore, raised from the dead, he, and all who followed him, of necessity faced imminent defeat. Should he come out of the grave, then there would be no question of life everlasting and the authenticity of his ministry.

Mankind is beset by fears of one kind or another, great or small, every day of his existence. Perhaps the greatest of these fears is the fear of death — the facing of the great unknown. For, no matter how bad things may seem in this life, at least we face them in a familiar background. Therefore, apart from the personal relationship felt by the disciples, it is easy to imagine the great sense of triumph that permeated their beings when they heard of their Lord's restoration from the grave. All their hardships, all their hard-won victories in the fight against great odds to spread Christianity among the people, were vindicated and crowned with significance. At last the fulfillment of mankind's natural hope and longing for life beyond the grave had been made sure.

The turning point had been reached. There was now, more than ever, a triumphant message to be carried abroad, and in the power of the risen Christ, the church began its conquest.

him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." — (Romans 10:9)

Lesson Text: Matthew 28:1-10, 16-20.

Today, as befits the time of year that is upon us, we strive more fully to understand the Resurrection and the meaning it has for us in our lives.

After the terrible ordeal of Jesus' crucifixion, Joseph and Nicodemus tenderly and reverently cared for the body of the crucified Christ, bathing and anointing it, and wrapping it in clean linens; then they placed it in the tomb, sealing it and rolling a stone before the door.

The two Marys, in whose lives Jesus had centered so strongly, as an act of love, made their pilgrimage to the tomb of the crucified Christ, only to find that He Chevrolet It's a bigger, more beautiful car this year. Which is why that handsome silhouette could be mistaken for cars costing a thousand—even two thousand—dollars more.

Chevy II No car so trim has a right to be so thrifty. But thrifty it is, with money-savers like brakes that adjust themselves and a long-lived exhaust system.

Corvair This one's got lively looks, spirited power, a softer ride—and remarkable room atop a highly maneuverable wheelbase. No wonder it's today's favorite mid-size car.

Corvair Ask any '65 Corvair owner how it feels to drive a car with such easy steering, tenacious traction and responsive rear-engine power. And be ready to do lots of listening.

The Genuine—Accept No Substitute.

Evil loses out; God wins! This is the message of the Resurrection. It is a triumph, so significant in its portent, that it must be told. Such was the command of the risen Lord. And always, following a great event, the command to spread the tidings was given to the followers of Christ. This, as anyone who studies the Bible will know, was the inevitable responsibility of those fortunate enough to participate in great experiences.

We, the beneficiaries of that infamous act on a hilltop many centuries ago, when God gave his only Son to death by crucifixion in order that we might be saved, are charged just as strongly, by a sense of gratitude for the blessings bestowed upon us, to spread the Christian Gospel far and wide. It is too great a gift not to be shared!

Why Is The Printed Word

So Important In Advertising?

It's CLEAR • It's PERMANENT
It's BELIEVABLE

The newspaper is the GREATEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM for many reasons. One of them is that it carries the power of the printed word. People believe in a message that is permanent—one that is written. They understand it better. Also, the newspaper, because of its permanence, lets the reader choose his own time for absorbing the message. And once put down it can always be picked up again. The message that lives is the one that is written in the newspaper.
