Four-H club members in Madison County will attend Camp Schaub near Waynesville during the week of July 13-17.

Boys and girls belonging to a community 4-H club had an opportunity to see slides on the camp during the month of April.

Any boy or girl in these communities who has been a 4-H member or would like to join a community club when organized may attend 4-H camp this summer. If you would like to attend, please contact the County Agent's office in the courthouse and your name will be added to the list of those to receive further information on the camp. Mail your letter of request to attend camp to Earle Wise or Barbara Rhodes, Marshall. We need your name, father's name and address by June 1 if you plan to attend.

through 19:10. The problem that confronts us in our lesson today is of especial interest to those among us who are parents; it is — how may we help our children develop respect for authority in the realms of the home, the school and — later — at work . . . ?

Much can be learned from the tragic events in King David's life — especially if it is borne in mind that "the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children." David was a great man in his day; he did much for his people, and much in the service of God. He was, however, a very human being, and he made his mistakes. He had been guilty of both adultery and murder; he had worshipped false gods. And these defections were not unknown to Absalom, his son.

Absalom was shrewd; he was ambitious; and a past-master in the art of strategy. He was popular with most of the people, and would doubtless have made an excellent king had he but disciplined himself in the ways of righteousness.

His brother Amnon's assault on his sister Tamar, and the resulting unhappiness, moved Absalom greatly. When David evaded punishing Amnon, Absalom took the law into his own hands and put Amnon to death. Fleeing David's wrath, Absalom laid the groundwork for his being proclaimed king — a goal which he kept foremost in his mind after David's eventual forgiveness and acceptance of him again in his household.

Poor David! How greatly he must have suffered — one son right and what is wrong, the main responsibility lies in the home. The home is the cradle where character is formed . . . and it is formed by parental example rather than parental platitudes.

Absalom never learned to love God, and was never able to follow His will. Are we fostering in our children's love for God that will transcend all human weaknesses and failings when life puts them to the test (as life inevitably will); are we teaching them respect for law and order during their sojourn on this earth? And, above all, are we teaching them a willing submission to God's authority in their lives? If we are not, then we are failing in our duty as Christian parents.

For while it is true that the church and schools have a certain amount of responsibility in teaching today's youth to have a proper respect for authority, and to differentiate between what is
