Psychological Program Of Social Services Praised

The psychological services program of the Department of Social Services, forerunner of the mental health program in North Carolina, was 50 years old on September 1.

Governor Scott has issued a special commendation for the fifty years of continuous psychological services provided by the program to thousands of both young and old citizens of the State.

Pioneering in the field of mental health was begun by the Bureau of Mental Health and Hygiene as this service was called when it was first set up in the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare in 1921.

The program was started with a staff consisting of two psychologists who gave psychological tests where needed and acted as consultants to schools, state institutions, orphanages and made a special study of eight county homes.

Recommendations were also made for Caswell Training School for the Feeble-Minded, State Hospitals, Central Prison and other institutions. The need was expressed for hospital facilities for epileptics.

The service through the years has had various responsibilities and made many recommendations in the field of mental health prior to the establishment of the Department of Mental Health in 1963.

The need for special classes in the public schools was pointed out by the service in 1932 when it was then called the Division of Mental Hygiene. During the 1934-36 biennium the service was given the responsibility of the selection of children for Special classes in the schools.

Two special classes were organized at Spring Hope, two in Henderson, and one was under consideration in the Adult cases were referred to determine eligibility for financial aid to the disabled, for Social Security benefits, to determine vocational possibilities, to determine ability to assume responsibility as head of the family, or the need for institutionalization.

Dr. Dorothy Park Griffin was chief of this service for 20 years prior to her retirement on June 30, 1971.

Dr. Leon D. Silber, who has been serving as assistant director of the Counseling Center at Catawba College in Salisbury, became chief of the service on September 1.

Having qualified as Administrator of the estate of Annie Mae Chandler of Madison County, North Carolina, this is to notify all persons having claims against the estate of said Annie Mae Chandler to present them to the undersigned within 6 months from date of the publication of this notice or same will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate please make immediate payment.

This the 31st day of August, 1971.

Miss Patterson Asst. Solicitor 7th District

The Seventh Solicitorial District, consisting of Wilson, Nash and Edgecombe Counties, and headed up by Roy Holdford, of Wilson, is getting two new assistants—one a woman.

She is Miss Sarah Frances Patterson of Wilson, the daughter of Mrs. Kathleen Patterson and the late Francis Patterson of Wilson. Miss Patterson is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Elmore, of Mars Hill.

In making the announcement, Holdford said, "I am extremely pleased that Miss Patterson and Williams will serve as assistant solicitors for the district. I believe they will do an excellent job in carrying out their respective duties in our four district courts."

The other assistant solicitor is Frank Brown, who has been serving in that capacity since January.

Miss Patterson, a Wilson native, attended Furman University in Greenville, S. C. and received her B. A. degree from Atlantic Christian College.

She received her Juris Doctor degree from UNC-Chapel Hill in June where she was an associate member of Phi Alpha Delta. She also holds a certificate in comparative law with highest distinction and merit from the City College of London, England.

Prior to entering law school, she was advertising manager for Belk-Tyler Department Store in Wilson.

The daughter of Mrs. Kathleen E. Patterson and the late Francis Patterson of Wilson, she is a member of the First Baptist Church of Wilson.

A graduate of Fike High

School, she was in the top 10 per cent of her class with a 2.5 average. At Furman University, she was 11th in a class of 43, a member of the Alpha Phi Gamma honorary journalism fraternity, activities chairman of the Young Women's Auxiliary and assistant managing editor of the school paper, The Paladin. She graduated from ACC in the top 25 per cent of her class; was member of the Sigma Pi Alpha honorary language fraternity; editor of the ACC handbook; recipient of the Denny Essay Award; a delegate to the State Student Legislature; president of Phi Mu Sorority; delegate to the National Panhellenic Conference; and served on the orientation committee. At the City College of London, she received a certificate in Comparative Law with highest distinction and merit and was third in a class of 100. She has also worked at UNC as a graduate counselor and managed the Phi Alpha Delta Book Exchange her third year in law school.

BY GUM! Chewing gum, when it comes to cavities, need not be a case of "tooth" and consequences. A new kind of gum containing a sugar substitute solves the problem. Keeping visits to the dentist down to a minimum, the new chewing gum habit attacks the very root of dental decay by appealing the sweet tooth without the risk of additional cavities. Clark's Di-et Gum flosses the teeth of excessive dental bills and agony. Many parents, rather than discourage their children from chewing, have taken a positive approach by giving them Di-et gum. This popular preparation satisfies a craving for sweets, yet does not promote tooth decay. In the battle to avoid cavities and reduce weight Di-et Gum consumers with caution are armed to the teeth. And for their own good, children can have all the gum they want without being chewed out.
