Females Born to Become Compulsive Spenders

IT PROBABLY comes as a surprise to no one, but girls start early to outspend boys... a lead which they manage to maintain until death, or an ugly credit manager... whichever comes first.

This difference among men and women has probably accounted for more domestic scenes than any other phase of marriage. Actually, spending is a genetic trait.

In every female is an exocrine gland called "Spend, Baby Spend." It is located in the palm of the hand which is why girl babies are born with the left hand cramped in a credit card position. (Males are born with closed fists.)

WHENEVER A WOMAN views signs reading: "SALE. END OF THE MONTH CLEARANCE. GOING OUT OF BUSINESS. LIQUIDATING. ONE-HALF OFF. NO PAYMENTS UNTIL AFTER CHRISTMAS", the other glands swing into action. Saliva begins to form in her mouth, the palms of her hands begin to perspire, tears of excitement form in her eyes, and the pituitary gland says, "Go Mama."

In the male, it is quite a different story. He has a gland which follows a muscle from his right arm down to the base of his billfold pocket. It is called "cheap." When a declaration of money is to be made, the muscle stiffens, the right hand becomes numb and he is unable to pull the billfold out of the pocket.

These genetic differences can best be explained by our recent experience in buying a freezer.

We discussed at great length at home how a freezer would save us money. We decided between us that the budget could stand the cost of a freezer. We saw an ad in the paper listing exactly the one we wanted at exactly the price we could pay. We took the checkbook from the desk and announced to the children, "We are going to buy a freezer tonight."

AT THE STORE, the salesman approached my husband and asked, "May I help you?" "We're just looking," said my husband and wandered into air conditioners.

I grabbed his arm. "Whatya mean we're just looking? We're going to buy a freezer!"

"Tough?" he asked in surprise.

"We decided it was a necessity."

"You said that when you got the dog's teeth capped."

The salesman returned. My reflexes instinctively opened my handbag, thrust it at the salesman and said, "Take what you need."

My husband shook his head muttering, "I wonder if there's a hormone you can take for poverty."

Hints for HOMEMAKERS

Tested Tips To Help You

Sticking and scorching is usually caused by excess moisture or improper iron setting. To avoid do not apply spray starch heavily and do not switch setting recommended to fabric type.

To restore body to permanent press and make ironing easier, apply a quality spray starch like Niagara. Spray lightly and evenly. Some fabrics do not absorb starch readily, allow starch to penetrate a few seconds before ironing.

Laundry dark fabrics separate from whites and from items such as Terry cloth that readily give off lint. Apply spray starch and iron on the wrong side. If necessary, iron from shine with a press cloth.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE senior Miss Carolyn Graham from Marshall, rolled up about 500 miles on her bicycle since beginning of school this year. It is her only mode of transportation and she rides it to Alcoa and Maryville high schools where she does teaching observation. Majoring in biology and terming herself a conservationist, she rides a bicycle for economy, for health reasons and because she dislikes noise and smell of many motorized machines. Diminutive Carolyn played women's basketball for two years and has served as cheerleader for two years. She also rides her bicycle to thrice weekly workouts at a health spa.

ROOM AT THE TOP

The man of the house will be ecstatic about his attic when it contains a study in which he and his thoughts can be buddy buddy. A sign saying "Quiet-Genius at Work" is hardly necessary after you set your mind to designing such a room.

A place to concentrate, this upstairs study was designed by Stan Paul and Louis Wilkinson for maximum privacy and quiet.

Translucent screens conceal an architecturally unattractive set of windows while permitting enough sunlight to filter through to nourish the mini-garden atop the bookshelf.

Crushed velvet covers the wall beside the writing table. It makes a useful hanging surface, good for display of paintings and photographs. The heavy nylon shag on the floor is from Burlington House Carpets. Called "Hit the Heights," the carpet is made of new high-luster Nylon yarns that produce color of great intensity and clarity. The company's designer Ian McMeekin has fashioned a series of fifteen combinations of color in which the carpet is being offered.

In addition to its strong fashion appeal, Burlington's new bright nylon gets high marks for durability, too. Knowledgeable carpet industry observers consistently rate this nylon top for resistance to abrasion and long wear. The carpet costs about $10.95 a square yard in stores. Think about it.

Could you afford a new washer if prices jumped?

That's why railroads are essential.

We can't promise a price freeze on washing machines. But we can say that shipping by rail remains one of the best bargains you'll find. That's one of the reasons Southern and other railroads are so popular with appliance makers. In fact, 71% of all household appliances are shipped by rail.

And shipping by rail is as dependable as it is economical. Maybe that's why railroads handle twice as much intercity freight as trucks. Two hundred times as much as airlines.

Which is why you need railroads. And why you need Southern.
