Williams, Fisher Attending Presbyterian Gen. Assembly

Each year about this time representatives from Presbyterian Churches all over the United States gather to conduct the business of the church. Such a meeting this year takes place in Louisville, Ky., June 17-26.

Basically the Presbyterian Churches have a representative form of government. The Marshall church belongs to the Holston Presbytery which is a group of churches in this area. They work together to assist each other in any problems that may arise. Yet, each church is autonomous, calling its own pastor and carrying on its own business as needs arise.

These Presbyteries are the ones that elect delegates, called commissioners, to their overall body called the General Assembly. This is the group that is meeting at Louisville this week and next. A pastor and a layman are so chosen.

The representatives that Holston Presbytery have elected this year have doubly honored the Marshall church. The pastor commissioner is Dr. Arthur F. Williams, and the layman, an elder of the church, is Mrs. Hugh Fisher. Dr. Williams and Mrs. Fisher will thus be the representatives of the Holston Presbytery.

Following the assembly, Dr. and Mrs. Williams will be visiting relatives in Akron, Ohio, for a short time.
