New Ruling Cited For Small Envelopes

"Use up your small and undersized envelopes and cards before July 15," Raymond Stines, officer in charge of the Marshall post office reminds customers. That is the date when the Postal Service's new size standards become effective.

Stines said that after July 15, envelopes and cards measuring less than three and one-half inches high or five inches long will be returned to the sender if mailed.

Stines said that because the envelope and greeting card industries have had more than three years to prepare for the new standards, few retailers should still be selling undersized pieces.

"Many consumers, however, are likely to still have smaller envelopes and cards in their supply of stationery," Stines said.

The regulations also prohibit flimsy cards. In the future they must be at least seven-thousandths (.007) of an inch thick. An official postal card, for instance, has a thickness of nine thousandths of an inch.

Undersized pieces and flimsy cards are being banned because they can become trapped in other mail, tear and jam mail processing machinery. As a result, the letters of others can also be damaged.

The standards also affect oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail. Stines said. For first-class mail weighing one ounce or less, there will be a surcharge of seven cents for pieces more than six and one-eighth inches high or 11¼ inches long.

For more information, Stines suggests customers check with a post office window clerk.
