Medieval Fair Set In Black Mountain

Michaelmas, the only Medieval Fair recreated in Western North Carolina, opens Oct. 20, in Black Mountain.

The fair will be held in In-The-Oaks, an Episcopal conference center, where there will be processions, games, medieval music, and medieval style food. It is sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese of Western North Carolina, which includes Madison County.

Michaelmas will begin and end with services of worship in accord with the church of the Middle Ages. Each will be marked by huge processions in which everyone attending will participate, led by pipers, trumpeters, banner bearers, choirs and clergy. Visitors will be given rhythm instruments to shake or bang during the pageantry.

As visitors wander about the 75-acre grounds they will mingle with jugglers, street dancers, wandering minstrels, and players of the boards. Artisans skilled in the crafts and arts of non-mechanized times will offer demonstrations and displays. For the children there will be games, jollities, and free child care.

More than 11,000 churchpeople in 63 parishes have been preparing for the festival for nearly a year — raising donations of building materials, cloth for tenting, banners and pennants and food authentic to the period.

Michaelmas is open to everyone, and there is no admission charge. The only items to be sold are food and programs, to defray some of the costs of materials and supplies. The Diocese intends Michaelmas to be an annual event from now on.

In the 1920 World Series against the Brooklyn Dodgers, Bill Wambsgans of the Cleveland Indians made an unassisted triple play.

Seminar On Leaf Color Change

The second of Mars Hill College's 1979-1980 "Saturday Seminars," a series of non-credit classes dealing with special interests or contemporary issues one Saturday each month, will be held Oct. 20.

This Saturday's seminar is entitled "Autumn Comes to Appalachia," and will be taught by Donald E. McLeod, assistant professor of biology at the college. McLeod, whose primary interest is botany, will discuss what happens to trees and plants during the annual color change, why the southern highlands have such a spectacular variety of colors, which he feels surpasses those of the New England states. He will show slides illustrating his lecture. If the weather permits he will conduct a tour of Mars Hill's campus to examine the oaks, maples and other variety of trees displaying their fall colors.

The Saturday Seminars are part of the college's community service and continuing education effort, according to Raymond C. Rapp, program coordinator for Continuing Education at Mars Hill. Registration and a coffee hour will be held from 9:30-10 a.m. in the lobby of Belk Auditorium, which is adjacent to Wren College Union. The seminar costs $5 and will begin at 10 a.m. A lunch break is scheduled from noon to 1 p.m. at which time the class will resume. A buffet lunch is available in the college cafeteria for $2, and the seminar is expected to last until 3 p.m.

This series of seminars is open to the general public and additional information may be obtained from Mr. Rapp in care of the Continuing Education Program, Mars Hill College, Mars Hill, 28754, telephone 689-1166.
