

Growing Up Southern

Gail Godwin, Larry Goodwyn Discuss Its Effect

Gail Godwin, a native of Asheville and noted southern author, and Larry Goodwyn, director of the oral history program at Duke University, will address the topic "Growing Up Southern: Heritage or Handicap" as the second in Mars Hill College's fellow series of speakers.

Ms. Godwin, who was born and raised in Asheville, has had four novels and one book of short stories published by Alfred Knopf publishers and her stories and essays have appeared in Harper's, Paris Review, MS, Cosmopolitan, McCall's, The New York Times, Atlantic and Esquire, and in addition has written the librettos for three operas. She has held both National Endowment and Guggenheim Fellowships and has taught at the Center for Advanced Study in Urbana, the Iowa Writers' Workshop, Vassar, and Columbia.

Dr. Goodwyn has had two books published by the Oxford University Press, the last in 1978 entitled The Populist Movement. He also authored the section on the south central states for the Time-Life series on the history of America and has published articles in The New Republic, Harper's, N.Y. Times, and the Washington Post. He was editor for a time of The Texas Observer an independent weekly journal of opinion, and in addition to his duties as director of the oral history program at Duke he is an associate professor of history there.

Both Dr. Goodwyn and Ms. Godwin, while addressing the overall topic of the series, "Growing up Southern: Heritage or Handicap," will also be speaking on a sub-topical, "How Southerners Make Decisions." The series, known formally as the Mellon Scholars Program, is funded by a $140,000 grant received from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to provide for enriching the campus environment and creating new learning situations for the entire community.

The schedule for the activities involving the speakers include two movies on Oct. 24 in Belk Auditorium. Beginning at 7 p.m. "Conrack" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" will be shown. Then on Oct. 25, activities being at 3 p.m. with a reading of her own work by Ms. Godwin in the Timberline Coffeehouse. Then at 6 p.m., either outside the college union or inside the cafeteria depending on the weather, the Mars Hill College stage band will give a concert. Dr. Goodwyn and Ms. Godwin will present their views on whether the developmental experiences of southern youth affect their ability to respond to contemporary social and political issues as adults at 7 p.m. in Belk Auditorium. A student rector panel will respond to their views and ample time will be allowed for audience participation. A buffet for all who attend will be held at 9:30 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

All of the events of the two days are free of admission charges and the public is encouraged to attend.
