

MHC Graduation Is May 18 Republican Primary

Approximately 275 seniors will receive their bachelor degrees Sunday, May 18, as Mars Hill College brings to a close its 124th academic year. Commencement weekend will officially begin Friday afternoon, May 16, with an exhibition of senior art in Peterson Gallery, located in Blackwell Hall. The exhibition will open at 4 p.m.

On Saturday, May 17, the Board of Trustees will hold their semi-annual business meeting. During the course of their meeting the trustees will approve new faculty appointments, increases in the coming year for tuition, and approve an overall budget which is expected to exceed $9 million. They will also elect new members to the college's Board of Advisors.

The trustees and advisors will be addressed by college president Dr. Fred B. Bentley during a joint luncheon at noon. A banquet honoring the graduating class, their families, and friends, will be held in the college cafeteria. Awards and recognitions will be made at this time, and the class will also be welcomed into the ranks of the alumni. Saturday's activities will culminate with a "pops" concert by the music department in Moore Auditorium.

On Sunday morning, May 18, the college community will be joined by the congregation of the Mars Hill Baptist Church to hear Dr. Frank R.

Campbell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Statesville, and a key figure in the settlement last year of the dispute between Wake Forest University and the N.C. State Baptist Convention, deliver the baccalaureate sermon at 11 a.m. also in Moore.

There will be a senior organ recital by Casey Dunaway of Waynesboro, Va. and Jim Holland of Gastonia, at 2:30 p.m. in Moore and at 3 p.m. the seniors will begin receiving their diplomas from Dr. Bentley. The weekend's activities will be brought to a close with Dr. Bentley's traditional address to the graduates and their families.

Special Nursing Program

(Continued from Page 1) strains of many deaths. Last year 19 of 70 home health patients died. They were older and critically ill patients but that doesn't make it any easier on the nurses, who have become involved with both the patient and the family.

After a stop at the Walnut/Marshall Medical Center to test the blood samples Fay had collected — this must be done within two hours of drawing blood — we headed for one final call, at the house of Lizzie and M.W. Payne, on Hamburg Road near the Yancey County border. On the way, some highway workers whistled at Fay, who made a face.

"That's one of the occupational hazards of this job," she said, "along with biting dogs. Another is that many people don't really understand how the program works. They think that they can call a home health nurse any time someone is ill. In fact, we can't see anyone without a doctor's written referral. A patient has to be seen by a doctor and placed under a doctor's care before we can make a call."

The Payne's house was very neat. Both enjoy working with wood and other craft media and both recently had exhibits in the windows of the county library. But Lizzie is slowed up lately by heart trouble and has less breath and energy for her hobbies. She is taking medication to ease the burden on her heart, so Fay listened to the beat and took a blood sample to check the coagulation rate. The beat was still irregular but smoother; Lizzie had a severe atrial fibrillation, or random, rapid contraction of part of the heart muscle. This interferes with the smooth pumping rhythm.

Fay's job is to watch over her recovery, consulting often with her doctor and keeping the medication at proper strength.

"The program," said Michael Norins, "is really intended for any patient where the attending physician feels that the patient needs skilled nursing care. Anyone is eligible, though most patients are on Medicare and Medicaid. For private patients, we have a sliding scale, according to ability to pay, just as we do in the Hot Spring Health Program. Most people don't know that there is this alternative to being in the hospital. And we feel that the psychic benefits of being at home are worth a great deal."

Lice no confidence problem, here
Lice may be a confidence problem at some pharmacies. But, here, you needn't fear embarrassment when you discuss such a condition with me. Certainly, case of lice infestations are rampantly increasing—with no social bounds! But just as certainly I can recommend an excellent drugstore product that will quickly and easily quell the problem.
My advice is to talk frankly about your condition to me, or to another trusted health official. You can be sure of strictest confidence.
