A PROPHET Speaks to America

ISRAEL was once the most favored nation on earth. Before its fall from its favored position, God sent the nation warnings by the mouth and pen of chosen messengers called prophets. Most of them were scorned and treated cruelly and were generally unrecognized as divine spokesmen until after their time.

The UNITED STATES has enjoyed Heaven's favors too. In point of privilege, she has been greatly exalted. But indications and omens of impending disaster are now too many and too frequent to ignore. Has God also sent messages to warn this great nation? He has. Almost one-hundred years ago, in 1884, at Battle Creek, Michigan, some startling predictions about America's future were published and copyrighted in the book, The Great Controversy, by Ellen White. They warned of great strife that would arise in the cities of the nation, moral revolution, lawlessness and disorder, and then, out of it all, a great change in the American Constitution. These remarkable predictions read as if they come from the pen of a contemporary observer of the American scene.
