It is nothing but right that they should have the privilege of sewerage and so far as cost to the town is concerned, this would not amount to anything compared with the benefit the residents would receive.

The school at Lillington has been so fortunate as to secure Editor Clarence Poe, of the Progressive Farmer, to deliver its commencement address on Friday morning, May 16. He is probably doing more for the farmers of North Carolina through the publication of The Progressive Farmer, than any man within her borders. His subject will consist principally, of methods of establishing and maintaining Farm Life Schools. He is one of the pioneers in this problematic field and it will pay you to hear his discussion of the subject. WALT MASON ON FLIES

The early fly's the one to swat. It comes before the weather's hot, and sits around and flies its legs, and lays at least ten million eggs, and every egg will bring a fly to drive us crazy by and by. Oh, every fly that skips our swatters will have five million sons and daughters, and countless first and second cousins and aunts and uncles, scores of dozen, and fifty-seven billion nephews; so knock the blamed thing all to pieces. And every niece and every aunt—unless we swat them so they can't lay enough dod-gasted eggs, ere summer hies, will bring forth twenty trillion flies. And thus it goes, an endless chain, so all our swatting is in vain, unless we do that swatting soon, in Maytime and in early June. So men, and brothers, let us rise, gird up our loins and swat the flies! And sisters, leave your cosy bowers, where you have wasted golden hours; with ardor in your souls and eyes, roll up your sleeves and swat the flies!

MR. BAGGETT TALKS

Senator J. R. Baggett was here yesterday from Lillington. "We have a growing little town down there," said Senator Baggett. "We have just erected a new school house, five stores are now in process of construction and a number of new residences. Our board of trade was organized about a year ago and has been mighty active building up the town and extending the business interests of Lillington. We are now after a farm-life school for the benefit of the farmers of our section and that reminds me, cotton is our part of the country, in spite of what I hear about farmers being behind behind in the crops on account of the weather conditions, is about a month in advance of last year. What I mean is that cotton planters are a month ahead of the game this year so far as the crop is concerned and there is no reason to believe that the yield will not stand a similar comparison when it is laid along side of the yield last year. We are expecting great things from that part of the state. The reason is, we are willing to do things, work hard and take chances on the development of one of the best sections in the State."

MEN TO MARRY

As to age, the same theoretic rule obtains for him as for the woman, the maximum of physical and mental readiness probably being 16 years after the beginning of adolescence.

His common school should be about the same as that required for the young woman, and it would be well, in case of an actual mating, if they had both attended the same type of common school.

During all the years of his physical development the young man should have been constantly trained and disciplined in the performance of the maximum variety of such work as the ordinary home, shop and field provide for the growing boy.

Besides having had ample experience in the performance of a variety of plain boy work, he should also be thoroughly trained and skilled in some bread-winning occupation, with a thought of making it his life work.

He should have been kept clean and pure in his moral life and should have a very high respect for the inherent worth and the reasonably guarded virtue of ordinary womanhood.

His wealth may not necessarily consist of a considerable amount of money saved or in prospect of an inheritance; provided, that he be trained as sketched above, and he have developed in his character a genuine money-making capacity.

He should be well informed as to the nature and status of women of various classes and should especially know what traits of character in young woman constitutes a guarantee of satisfactory wifehood and motherhood.

He should have the habit of being frank and honest and courageous in his business dealings and should possess a sense of responsibility as a bread-winner for the family of which he expects to be the head.

He should possess a genuine interest in children, should have considerable theoretical knowledge about their care and training and should be conscious of a father's full duty in respect to all other family duties.

OSHAUGHNESSY AND LIND

Atlanta Constitution.

Our Ombroglio with Mexico has done us at least one substantial service. It has developed the fact that there are in the American diplomatic corps two men of rare impeccable discretion, Nelson O'Shaughnessy and John Lind.

The one at the heart of things in the Mexican capital and the other at Vera Cruz have served their country with signal efficiency. Above all, they have done so with unflinching reliance. They are in a class by themselves.

A revealing glance was secured at O'Shaughnessy in his fifteen-minute stop in Atlanta last week.

The man was travel-worn, exhausted, frayed out from tension of months' duration. It was natural to assume he was bubbling with resentment, bursting with opinions.

The trained reporters of the town were loosened on him. Yet they ried out not one leading bit of information, despite their most ingenious questionings.

O'Shaughnessy left them as ignorant as when he found them. But he left them with a good taste in their mouths, a fine impression of breezy, enduring, courageous American manliness.

For he told them frankly he couldn't and wouldn't talk about his experience in Mexico, where they at corners of new types in our foreign affairs touched his diplomatic mission service. Not stiff, not taking themselves too seriously, reserved, yet about with engaging freshness and sociable, they represent the great candor. Once the interviewers got genius of this country.

on the danger zone, he shut them off. May the O'Shaughnessys and the with a smile and joke, that disarmed Linda multiply in America without offense and left them humbly regard to the speed limit. We can't have too many of them.
