After several hours discussion the tomorrow. conferees adopted three resolutions conferees adopted three resolutions recommending combining of the two groups, and then took up discussion of a name for the new party.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Pederation of Labor, a keynote speaker, brought the convention to the highest enthusiasm with a plea "that the day would come when the working people of the United States would got together and do a job such as the workers of Russia have done."

The biggest demonstration of the day was accorded this reference, delegates stampeded and whistied, and when one called for "three cheers for Soviet Russia," they were given.

Fitzpatrick declared there was nothing to prevent the "hand and brain workers taking the government out of the bands of—not Amgricans, but international financial pirstes, and advised all the minority groups to unite on one ticket.

Agree On Labor Platform

In opening the convention, Max Hayes chairman of the Labor party's national committee, declared that "every political group assembled in this city agrees in substance to the platform," which the Labor party had formulated last November. This statement brought forth prolonged applause, in which delagates wearing badges of the single taxers, forty eighters, and other elements attending the convention, joined.
