rhought in mind set us consider the portibition ruckus.

Seemingly the wets are in the majority. Most of the newspapers of the states which average elections have demanded reconsideration. Numerous positions have snatched at modification as a popular issue and various candidates have hopped aboard for a ride. The general contention has been that something inalienable has loven that a sleeping citizenry has at inst discovered the freud and is roused to light.

But right at the high fever point of this contention came the two majority of this contention came the two majority and the state of the state of

MORE SONG AND LESS RICE

Th bobolink is not only a beautiful bird but a rave songater. To see him rise from the meadow and hear him warbling his wonderful song as he wints his way upward is one of the expessive delights of a northern June. But they see, he loves rice; that he takes his toll of the southern rice fields. Of caure he does. Sinds have to live. They can't live on air and water any more than Caruso and Meiba and Gaill-Curei. They ought not to sing for nothing. Many of us would rather have the song than the rice, or at least a little less rice even if rice were all we could get for food. Because he robs the rice grower it is proposed to except him from the migatory bird hav and kill him at sight or poison him by the wholesale. Are we forever to estimate all values in dollars and cents? Even from that low level we venture the statement that month in and month out he pays the world all he owes it. True as it may be that he would spoil a rice field in the South unless with guns and other devices he was prevented, yet in May and June and July masets make up 85 per cent of his food in the North. For at least three months of the year he is a faithful worker far the surface. General surface of his food in the North. For at least three months of the year he is a faithful worker far the surface. General surface and none of the bitter. The old Scotchman admitted his wife had had the smalipox, was very, very ugly, of-Scotchman admitted his wife had had the smallpox, was very, very ugly, of-ten drank too much, but then he said,
