THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

In less than ten days after the small blaze partly destroyed the roof on the house, occupied by Malcolm Summerlin, on East Cumberland St., another fire has completely destroyed the home of W. T. Turnage on South Magnolia Avenue, Dunn, N. C.

When the first little fire came several days ago and the fire alarm sounded, it was discovered that no gasoline was in the fire truck tank. So the fire company had to push the truck across the street and get gas before making the trip to the scene of the fire.

When the second fire came Wednesday morning, completely destroying the home of W. D. Turnage, the fire truck made its appearance shortly after the alarm sounded, but after it made its appearance little good it did. The company was badly disorganized, and the stream of water from the hydrant was so weak that the firemen could hardly get near enough to the burning house to get water on top of it.

When the second fire came Wednesday morning, completely destroying the home of W. D. Turnage, the fire truck made its appearance shortly after the alarm sounded, but after it made its appearance little good it did.

We cannot help but believe that property owners and others interested in Dunn, will cooperate in the reorganization of a real fire department. If the company is voluntary, we believe that the people ought to be made to realize the need in an efficient and well practiced organization. It is our duty to the insurance companies, to ourselves, to our town.

It, after proper pressure is brought to bear, a voluntary fire company cannot be successfully organized, then we are of the opinion that Dunn ought to have a paid fire company. We certainly can't go on like this, something must be done, and something must be done right away. That third fire is coming, and we don't want it to catch us with another empty tank or with another lawn hose frozen.

tion would in future be given to exhibitors and visitors from this side of the river. Secretary Riddle is keen to recognize the value of cooperation from the entire county in making the Fair what it should be if it is to be known as a Harnett County institution.

And, too, it will be well for people in this territory to lay plans to exhibit at the Fair worthy specimens of products, livestock, canning, hand-made articles, etc. By swelling the total number of exhibits the Fair will be made bigger, better and consequently more interesting.
