Armistice Day

This day marks the third anniversary of that day when all the world rejoiced—when the battling nations of the world laid down their arms and America told its millions of mothers that their sons were coming home. That was a joyous day—that day three years ago. America was frenzied. It went mad with joy, promising itself that it would never live of honoring the boys who made that day possible.

In the intervening three years the country has forgotten much. In the hospitals of the land 26,300 boys who went overseas to offer their lives are suffering a living death. Wrecked of health, hopelessly they await the coming of the grim reaper. Throughout the land hundreds of thousands are without the work which would give them the necessities of life.

While we celebrate today and pay tribute to the thousands who fell on the field of battle, let us not forget to utter a prayer for those who came back to suffer for years in a hospital or be denied the comforts of life through unemployment.

Locknow Square

Next week the contention between the Town of Dunn and Atlantic Coast Line Railway Company as to who is the rightful owner of Locknow Square is to be settled in Harnett County Superior Court.

There is much difference of opinion as to the final outcome, but all of Dunn is agreed as to the real merits of the case. Everybody who has studied the case with an unbiased mind is convinced that the square is public property. Some say that it is public property only so long as it is used as public market place; others say that it is the public to be used as the public deems best for the public weal. Nowhere is there belief that the railroad company has any real claim to it to use for other than public purposes.

Ernest F. Young, Robert L. Godwin and L. Roland Williams are counsel for the town. They are confident that they can convince a jury that the property belongs to the town to be used for any public purpose the town sees fit to use it for.

Dunn desires to convert the square into a place of beauty—a rest place for country men and women who come to town to trade; a recreation center for men, women and children of the town. Already the commissioners have designated the Women's Club as a body to provide for future use of the square. If the court decides that the town really own the property the Women's Club will start a campaign to convert the square into a park and will endeavor to raise funds sufficient for the construction of community building to house public baths, rest rooms and offices for the various clubs and civic organizations of the community.

Here is hoping that the town wins, knowing that its cause is a just one.

Municipal Ownership Falls

Municipal ownership of light and water service here has failed. That was expected from the beginning, but at the time the service was started there was no other way through which the town and its people and industries could be served.

The plant as it is now constituted cost the people of Dunn approximately $40,000. A sum equal to that will be needed to rehabilitate it and place it in shape to furnish adequate service to the community in the event the town decides to continue service under its own ownership.

The Carolina Light and Power Company offered the town $45,000 for its plant and a sixty-year franchise and agrees to reduce current rates to patrons to about two-thirds of the present rate. It also guarantees to provide adequate service for domestic and industrial use.

With the $40,000 offered by the company the town will be permitted to retire all of its outstanding bonds voted for light and power plant construction and have a surplus of $5,000 to retire floating indebtedness due to deficits to municipal operation.

In addition the town will be saved future deficits and its citizens will be permitted reductions in the cost of service equal to more than one-fifth their annual taxes for all municipal purposes.

There may be some among the people of Dunn who will oppose the sale. There are always some who will stand in the way of municipal progress for no reason at all save their innate conservatism. There are still others who are so apathetic in all matters concerning the municipality that they will not feel it incumbent upon them to vote in the election to be held next month to ratify the contract made with the power company.

For these reasons it behooves all public spirited men and women to do all they can to carry this election. If you love your town and have any desire to see it progress, you must vote in the election.

Cotton Drops

It appears from Wednesday's gaining report that there is considerably more cotton in the South than previous reports indicated. For that reason cotton has taken a decided slump, falling close to the sixteen cents mark on the local market yesterday.

As usual the slump brought hundreds of bales to market, our old friends feeling that the safest thing to do was to sell before the price went lower. All over the South the same thing was going on. Fear of lower prices brought cotton to market. More cotton on the market drove prices downward.

That will always be the case with cotton growers until the cooperative marketing idea is in full operation. The quicker all of our cotton growers get into the cooperative movement, the quicker they will be able to dictate to the purchaser what he shall pay for their cotton.
