er county. If property is valued too high, and as a result taxes are too burdensome in any county, the governor points out, it is a waste of reath to abuse the state administration; the matter is one for the coun-y authorities. The commissioner at the county seats, not the governor and his cabinet at Raleigh, are the officials who settle the question of valuation and fix the tax rate. The state now collects no property tax whatever, and while deriving no revenue from the counties through s property tax, does pay into the school fund of some 70 counties, monies that are derived from the state tax on franchises, inheritances, in
