KNOW NORTH CAROLINA: WHAT NORTH CAROLINA NEEDS

(Joseph Daniels)

1. First and foremost a revival of old-fashioned religion—the old fashioned religion both of faith and of works. Faith, of course, is fundamental, but the religion of works is also a necessity if the world is to be reached. Works is the only argument that has any weight with the world.

2. Revival of old-fashioned economy. This is necessary on part of the individual, for we can never be a prosperous state until we are a collection of thrifty individuals. Old-fashioned economy on the part of every subdivision of government from the voting precinct to the State itself is also an urgent need.

3. A change in the banking laws by which drastic limitations could be placed on the loaning by banks of the money in those banks to officers of the same. Nearly all banks that fail, fail from within.

4. Striking from the constitution the provision declaring that salaries of judges shall not be reduced during their term of office or adding a provision that the prohibition as to reduction of salary does not regard the collection of tax such as is imposed on all citizens of like ability to pay as a reduction of salary.

5. A more vigorous enforcement of the law forbidding usury. It is broadly charged that some individuals and some banks are charging by extortion a rate of interest of more than six per cent interest on money.

6. Strengthening the primary law and making it proof against trickery and fraud.

7. The more vigorous enforcement of law in North Carolina, the establishment of an aggressive leadership in law enforcement, and the devotion by the Attorney General of all his time to the duties of his office.

8. Adhering to, enlarging and strengthening, on part of the farming interests, of the policy of co-operative marketing and co-operative education. This is the most promising means of placing the farmer on a better economic basis.

9. The effecting of such changes in the relations between tenant, landlord, and supply-merchant, as will make it possible for the tenant farmer as well as the land owner to practice diversification of crops.

10. The advocacy by all persons of influence of the policy of 'living at home and boarding at the same place,' both as a wise economic system generally and as the wisest measure against the threatened invasion of the boll weevil.

All right, raise the bonus by a tax on radios.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Lean Drunkenness Among the Poor. Prohibition has reformed some, declares Evangeline Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in America, in a statement announcing that since the enactment of the Volstead Act drunkenness among the poor has almost entirely disappeared and that the money which formerly went into the bar-room till is now going into bank deposits. In their replies to a questionnaire sent to them from Salvation Army Headquarters, the social secretaries said cases of drunkenness are now the exception among men who frequent the Army hostels, shelters and industrial homes. According to the statement, as it is quoted in press reports:

"More than two million beds were supplied by the Salvation Army last year, and it is on these two millions cases that our secretaries base their answers. In one hostelry it was reported that 120 men who have never been known to keep a dollar more than 25 hours now have banking accounts of considerable size. In another hotel 25 men of the sort who before prohibition could not keep a dime now save deposits ranging from $100 to $500. These are unusually bright instances, but everywhere the workers of the Salvation Army have found a marked increase in thrift and prosperity and a decrease in drunkenness.

"In refutation of the charge that drunkenness has increased since prohibition, Commander Booth cites the fact that the Salvation Army's annual 'Boozers' Day,' when drunken men and women were collected from the streets, fed, clothed and prayed with, has been abandoned and the day given over to entertaining the newsboys and poor youngsters of the city.

"Because prohibition has cleared our park benches of drunkards, we are able to entertain 5,000 boys under 14 years old in New York City on this day, these boys being benefited because one of the greatest curses of humanity had been placed beyond the reach of men and women."

Mother. The second Sunday in May is Mother's Day. Sad is the lot of that person whose life has not been blessed with the love of a good mother. Of course all mothers are human, but the virtues of good mothers so far obscure their faults, that the latter fade from memory. Motherhood is so unselfish, so devoted, so forgiving, so full of faith and hope and love for the child, that we can understand the feeling of that man who said, "God could not be everywhere; so he made mothers." As long as mothers live we have at least one disinclined friend.

away into the silent land there is the sense of a loss that nothing on earth can restore. We cherish through life the tokens that a dying mother left us, and in hours of pain and grief we stay ourselves upon a mother's faith in a mother's God. That is well; but it is better to make the most of our mothers while they are yet with us. To buy a costly casket for a dead mother, to bank her grave with flowers, to set up an expensive monument—all that is a poor offset for the neglect of a living mother or for the grief and pain that our waywardness brought to her tender heart.

Mother's Day will prove a blessing just in proportion as it makes us stop and ask: "What sort of a son or daughter am I? Am I as tender and considerate of my mother as she was of me in the hours of childhood's helplessness and need? Am I justifying a mother's faith and love?"

The subject has another aspect. Some mothers will read these lines whose children's characters are still in the making. In this rushing age when many voices are calling to the mother outside of the home it is hard to "put first things first." A mother can easily leave her children to others while she seeks a "larger sphere." But the most tragic of all human failures is the mother who falls with her own children. Mother's Day is a good time for a mother to stop and ask herself: "What kind of a mother am I? Am I giving the best of myself to my children, or are they getting only the dregs of my life?" Even a tidy home cannot compensate for children neglected or left to run wild. Neither nurse, nor teacher, nor governess, nor grandmother can take the place with a child that a mother was meant to fill. The best ideal of motherhood is that found in the Bible: "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her, saying, Many daughters have done worthily, but thou excellest them all." (Prov. xxxi 28, 29.)

On the second Sunday in May let us by all means wear a white or red rose for mother; but let us also remember the commandment which says, "Honor thy father and thy mother."—The Adult Student.

To Mother—At Set of Sun. As once you stroked my thin and silver hair,

So I stroke yours now at the set of sun,

I watch your tottering mind, its day's work done,

As once you watched with forward looking care

My tottering feet, I love you as I should.

Stay with me; lean on me; I'll make no sign,

I was your child, and now time makes you mine.

Stay with me yet a while at home and do me good.

—L. J. Dickenson.

Send The Best Men. The best men should be sent to the Legislature. The people in any county are unjust to themselves and unjust to the State if they allow the office to go begging. It is a matter of most importance who makes our laws. Men and women of capacity of character, of patriotism should be sent to the Legislature.

The Wilmington Star says: New Hanover county for the first time in many years has the privilege of sending to the next Legislature two members of the House and one Senator. Our standing in the State and our influence on the administration of the State government and the making of the laws will depend upon the kind of men we send.

There has never been a time within the last 24 years when it was so important to the State and to New Hanover county that we should send three men to Raleigh who are the ablest, wisest and most experienced in public affairs that live in our midst.

That is true of New Hanover county and it is true of every county, whether it will have one or four representatives. Those who want the best results in legislation cannot afford to sit idly by and let events take their course without any effort to shape them to the securing of desired ends in the form of wise laws.
