PRESIDENT HANDS FORMER SOLDIERS "JOB" STUFF ONLY

members of Congress had failed to do this absolute bit of justice, they would have been pilloried, perhaps worse, he gets down to what may be termed the crux of his disapproval of the bill that is that Congress did not heed him and levy a general sales tax, adding: "Such a plan was unacceptable to the Congress and the bill has been enacted without even a suggested means of meeting the cost." It has been set out in this correspondence from time to time that such an excuse for a veto would come. It was to make possible such an excuse that the Republican conferees threw out of the bill Simmons amendment which provided that the interest on the foreign debt should be used to pay the bonus cost, at the same time throwing out the McNary land project amendment, so that the West and South might be too much aroused over the veto of President Harding.

Cat Out Of Bag

And the President lets another cat out of the bag. The Republicans have been shouting as to how splendidly they have been saving money since they came into power, and here comes President Harding saying "the latest budget figures for the current fiscal year, show an estimated deficit of more than $650,000,000 and a further deficit for the year succeeding, even after counting upon all interest collections on foreign indebtedness which the government is likely to receive." And on this same day there was a deficiency bill presented in the House of over $660,000,000 for the current fiscal year. It will be noted also that President Harding himself thinks that there will be interest paid on foreign indebtedness, though there are those who were hooting at the same view when presented by Senator Simmons. But this foreign indebtedness is now to be used to pull the Republicans out of the financial tangle in which they find themselves.

Big business has had its way with President Harding and he has vetoed the soldier bonus bill. And while the House of Representatives, by reason of there being enough Democrats in it to turn the scales, will not sustain the veto, the outlook is that big business will be successful in having enough men in that body to swell a veto there to just above the one-third figure to sustain the veto. That is the outlook and the former service men may as well make up their minds that the game is up for the present and that they will have "to pick their flints and try again." And as they do so they should remember that President Harding said in his message that there will be "a further deficit next year," which is a warning of no bonus next year without a sales tax. And he will not suggest a tax that will reach the war profiteers.

CASPER WARREN LEAVES DUNN TO ENTER MINISTRY

do not have so much difficulty in making the proper decisions, but those who are not must sooner or later face squarely the cause of their unrest. The causes of such unrest differ with respect to the life of the individual.
My life has been all that any young man could hope for, yet for several years there has been a strange tug at my heart, with an apparent warning that we are out of place when we remain in a profession or position, that fails to call into play, in the highest possible way, the greatest number of our best faculties. In moments of prayer and meditation and even amid the crowding cares of life, it has come unbidden and unwelcome to disturb and trouble. I could not understand.
About twelve years ago in the old wooden church that many of you in memory hold so dear, my Sunday School Teacher remarked that he believed God would some day call one of us boys into full time service for Christ. Though only a lad of twelve or thirteen an unseen finger seemed to point me out. I couldn't understand.
During my high school life, I was convinced that my lot would be found either in the profession of law or the ministry. Why two? Oh, the perplexities this question has caused me to endure. I couldn't understand.
During the first three years of my college course, it was unusually noticeable that I, a law student, could take such an active interest in Y. M. C. A. and B. Y. P. U. work. I could not be satisfied to lie around on the Campus when these meetings were in session. I could not understand.

At my first in the army where the atmosphere was all but religious, where only religious service was conducted by a Catholic chaplain, I was instrumental in organizing a Bible Class and procuring the service of a Baptist pastor in a nearby town as preacher. A few weeks passed and he was called away. The task fell to me, by request of the boys, many of whom were among the so-called "rough neck and hard boiled" class. The activities of our teacher's church ceased and there were a few weeks later that I first participated in organizing a Y. P. U. which led to the reopening of the church. I don't know why I chose these things nor why the fathers chose me. I couldn't understand.
How happened I was in my senior year at college to face each day the glaring question, "Shall it be law or the ministry?" Only God will ever know how I managed to see the close of that year. Oh that I could have stopped the wheels of time and remained in college forever, was often my thought, but such a thought had no place in the Infinite plan. Why should I fear this way? I couldn't understand.
My highest ambition was to be a good lawyer, but until a few days ago I couldn't understand why everything seemed to draw me from it, why my very nature seemed to be perverted. So alone with God I've settled it all and now I understand, and now I must pass on.
I had a voice you cannot hear which says I must not stay; I see a hand you cannot see which beckons me away.
Oh how I want to leave you, you who have been so dear and meant so much to me. Yes, "I'd stay in the garden with Him, but He bids me go." How weak and unworthy I am but His Grace is sufficient. I can't do much but:

"There's surely somewhere a lowly place, in earth's harvest fields so wide, where I may labor thro' life's short day

For Jesus, the crucified."
In view of the above facts I resign as superintendent of our Sunday School and if in your opinion I am worthy to enter upon further preparation to be your representative for Christ I shall appreciate your letter of approval to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

God bless you every one and may His guiding Spirit ever overshadow, protect and comfort you and when His will shall have been accomplished, may we meet within the eternal gates to share His Glory forever.
