

SMALL FIRE SATURDAY

The spread of a fire kindled to burn trash in the back yard of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Shall caused the turning in of a fire alarm early Saturday afternoon. There was much smoke, but little fire. Chief Bissell's laddies quickly extinguished the blaze.

He jealous today for the rights of our fellows, then may we hope that tomorrow they will be jealous for our rights.

AUTOMOBILE IS AN ESSENTIAL

"One inherent idea which has somewhat impeded the progress of the automotive industry" declares Emmett E. Thompson local Durant dealer in four and six cylinder models, "is that the automobile is a luxury and a seasonal product. The very name 'pleasure car' is a remnant of that feeling.

"In the early days when the automobile was in the experimental stage there were some ground for implying that a car was a luxury. Then, the automobile could not stand up in any kind of weather, and its use was really seasonal.

"Again, the price was high, and was far from being within reach of the average citizen. 'A rich man's plaything,' and 'an expensive toy' were some of the titles given the automobile in those pioneer days.

"That era has past. Today the automobile is one of the vital factors in the life of any community. The mechanical efficiency achieved by automotive engineers enables a car to brave the rigors of all kinds of weather and climate. This achievement has encouraged public faith in the use of the motor car.

"Both in business, in the family, and in social pleasures, the automobile is used the year round. It is no longer regarded as a plaything or a luxury. Instead, the business man and his family depend upon the car to get them to work, in town and to the theatre. During vacation time, and on holidays, they charter it for long pleasure jaunts.

"In actual commercial work, motor trucks are employed extensively, and have contributed their share to greater business production.

"The price of the automobile is no longer prohibitive. The range of the automobile market today meets any man's finances. The public has come to regard a car as a splendid investment, for the return in good service is worthwhile. Aside from a financial investment, most men regard it as one of the necessities of life, and consider the automotive salesman in the same category as the purveyor of food, raiment, shelter and heat.

"By completely meeting the many requirements of transportation, the automobile itself has become an essential rather than a luxury."
