Cotton Prices Scaring And Duke People Will Be Able To Steel Production Nears 100 Per Cent Mark

New York, March 4 .--- Continued prices and additional indications of great industrial activity featured the past week in finance and commerce. Firmness in commodity prices was in the main a reflection of the strong industiral situation, steel prices again moving toward higher levels and nonferrous metals, particularly copper making a material advance.

In steel buyers are still anxious to obtain places on the manufacturers' books, and the makers have now raised their rate of operations close to 90 per cent of capacity, while prices of finished steel products have risen so that the Iron Age's index stands at $27.49 as compared with $18.10 a ycar ago

Cotton Prices Strong Cotton is another commodity which displayed romarkable strength, during the past week. New high records from Craven juil to Jack onville this were achieved, the May future reaching 30.84 cents.
