

John Judge Dies At Fayetteville Home

Was One of the Best Known Printers And Business Men in The State

Fayetteville, Feb. 27.—John W. Judge, master printer and business man of this city, died at his home on Gillespie street at 6 o'clock last evening. Mr. Judge's death was the result of an illness of a week's duration, which was the culmination of two years of ill health.

Mr. Judge was the head of the Judge Printing company, which he founded about 15 years ago. Capable opinion regarded him as one of the best printers in this state. As a business man he was enterprising, thorough, and successful. Always public spirited, he was prominently identified with many phases of the life of his community. Though he never sought political office, he served for many years as chairman of the county board of elections. Faithful, efficient, and always courteous, he filled this post with credit to himself and to the elections system. He was also a director and treasurer of Cape Fear Fair association, and was a member of Cumberland lodge No. 5, Knights of Pythias, and Cross Creek lodge No. 4, I. O. O. F. He was a member of the Hay Street Methodist church, and the funeral services will be conducted by Rev. H. A. Humble, pastor of that congregation, from the residence tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Judge is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. W. C. Verdyer, of this city.

Dead And Buried He Is Now In The Jail

Charged With Forgery Man Given Up For Dead Returns Home—Wife Married

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 27.—Glenn B. Mayes, president of the Campbell County Coal company, given up as murdered when a charred and mutilated corpse identified as his was found in the ruins of his cabin in the remote recesses of Campbell county August 25, 1921, is a prisoner at the Knox county jail charged with forgery.

Under a grass grown mound in a local cemetery repose the remains of the man of flesh and bones buried as those of Mr. Mayes on August 28, 1921, due and proper funeral services having been conducted at the late home of the deceased on the day in question with well known coal operators of this territory having served as pallbearers.

Arrest and return of the former mine operator to Knoxville was preceded two days by the remarriage of his wife to a resident of this city last Saturday. Tonight she denied knowledge that Mayes was alive, declaring that she had been assured that he was dead, "had attended his funeral and mourned him as lost."

The arrest of Mayes followed a search extending over 14 months and leading into several states. Detectives who handled the case for local banks charging him with forging checks totalling $2,200 on his brother-in-law, said today that they had caused Mayes to be arrested at Filbert, West Va., in May, 1922, where he was going under the name of F. H. Hill. He escaped from the jail at Welch, W. Va., the following day and has been at liberty since.
