WANT LICENSE—NOT LIBERTY

Every now and then there comes to this office—and we suppose other newspapers have the same brand of literature thrust upon them—a magazine called "Liberty." We have never paid for this magazine, we never wrote the publishers that we wanted it, and so far as we know they never expect to get any money from us for it. Then what is it? Why do they single us out in this community as the special object of charity and concern? Propaganda. That's it, or to use a good North Carolina word, bunk, the veriest buncombe.

"A magazine of religious freedom" in red letters across the main mast. But a little study of this publication reveals a subtle undercurrent, or main current, of radical propaganda. It seeks not religious freedom nor "liberty," nor anything else that is consistent with thoroughgoing Americanism. It agonizes over the so-called "blue laws" and Sunday laws, or legislation motivated by churches and Christian people, aimed at securing a proper observance of Sunday. In the craven and crafty thinking of this sheet church people have no right to compel Sabbath observance by civil laws. The editor or editors would permit the lawless element in any community to run rife on Sundays and the only means he would employ to curb their savage instincts would be moral suasion and love.

Gasoline filling stations, motion picture houses, stores, shops, and enterprises of various kinds he would permit to operate on Sunday if they wished without regard to the decent instincts of civilized people. And this so-called "magazine of religious freedom" is published at our national capital, in the very shadow of the Washington monument.

In every community there is a lawless irresponsible element that must be held in restraint, either by the civil law or by the physical prowess of two-armed, red-blooded men, who believe in right and decency. There are men who would keep open saloons on main street on Sunday. There are others so utterly devoid of reverence, respect and the civilities of life that they would engage in profane, wanton and ribald speech in the presence of women, children and old men who have lived lives that are above reproach. It is this element that makes law and restraint necessary. Then have the Christian people and church people, in many cases predominately representative of a community's citizenship, no right to seek laws that will compel a decent regard for law observance and Sabbath observance? Has a small and unruly minority any right to offer insult to a majority of the people of a community, because this minority is irresponsible, lawless, and ungodly?

And true to type this publication goes back to the Puritans and has a holy horror of Puritanism. There are pious perverts who belittle and belabor the Puritan. But even if he did burn a few witches, or chop off the heads of people because they insisted on desecrating the Sabbath, he made the greatest single contribution to our traditional greatness as a nation, and from him we got most of our independence-of thought, liberty for American ideals of rugged honesty, the individual and thoroughgoing up-standing manhood and womanhood.—Laurinburg Exchange.

Studebaker

We believe a Studebaker Sedan is good for five to ten years of useful, satisfactory life. We are not positive as to the real life because none has yet worn out.

If, when you trade in your car, you learn that you can get only three or four hundred dollars for it because there is no second-hand market for that make of car, then you must add this extra depreciation to arrive at the real cost of the car.

The trade-in price of Studebaker cars shows a very small depreciation, in many sections the smallest of all makes of motor cars. And there is always a ready market for used cars of Studebaker manufacture.
