The men were having trouble with the sign post. He heard the stair door tried and a voice called: "Hustle with that post!"

He Could Not Satisfy Them.

night Delaney had promised to try again but he had not come to report, though Brandon had waited late. And now the crowd was howling for Elliott; lacking Elliott, they would take him.

He gained the middle of the street in an impressive hush. Then he murmured a word to Able and they halted. He looked about at his men and smiled a trifle weakly, but in his look was a quality which clearly indicated that love which strong men have for their kind.

"It's all right, boys," he said and only those in the first ranks could hear, his voice was that light. "They didn't get me ... badly. I appreciate this ... but want you to ... get back to ... camp."

He panted for breath and lifted his face to the broken windows above. Far back in that room he caught a glimpse of a face watching him—cocked as though striving to hear. "It's my fight," he went on. "Not yours. . . I don't want any . . . of you hurt. Go back. . . Will you go . . . back?"

The crowd stirred. "You bet we will, Ben!" a man called. "Now that you're located if you ask it, we will!"

Tim Jeffers worked his way to Ben's side and put a hand on his shoulder, listening to what Able told him. "Go home, boys!" Tim Jeffers called. "They knifed Ben last night but he's well took care of. You teamsters, get out your horses; we've found what we come for. To camp, every last Hoot Owl hand!"

Men relaxed. The post that was to have buttered in Brandon's door was dropped. The mob was satisfied. Slowly Ben Elliott made his way back to Dawn's home.

As Tim Jeffers took his place beside the sick man, Able Armistage drew into the post office entry to watch the mob disperse. Emory Sweet was standing there.

"The king is dead!" Able muttered solemnly, staring at those broken windows. "Long live the king!" said Emory. Pause. "Dead men tell no tales."

"No, but sometimes a corpse will kick back!"

read. These were Dawn McManus' letters to him, saved since her childhood. He ran through them almost idly, his senses dulled by whisky and the calamity which had befallen him. A narrow slip of tablet paper fell out. He looked at the pencilled note on one side.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

Happier memories, that brought of the time Dawn had brought girls home with her from school for Thanksgiving and had taken them to the hunting camp for a week-end.

Brandon had gone with the party and it was there that he had first remarked Dawn's emerging womanhood, that the desire for her had been kindled in his blood; there in the camp where her father, as the whole country knew, had been with Sam Faxon on the night when Faxon fled to his death. But Dawn had never known that. She had laughed and been happy at Antler Lodge.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

He read it again. It bore no date it was unsealed; it betrayed no indication of the time that had passed since its inscription. The note had been left on his desk for him three years before.

After a moment he straightened and smiled oddly. A look like relief, almost like happiness spread over his face.

Fine strength of body healed Ben Elliott's wound rapidly. By mid-week he was dressed and sitting before the fire with Dawn, talking of his return to Hoot Owl on the morrow.

"It's been so good, even under the circumstances, to spend time with you," he said gravely.

The girl flushed but made no reply. "And all the time I've been wondering, Dawn, why you wouldn't let me come. . . . You're being so kind, so generous, so . . . so friendly. And yet, only a few days ago, you told me I must never come again. Why was it, Dawn? Why, when I love you so?"
