

Daniels Heard By A Large Audience Sun.

division of the products of industry that can be devised and provides a living wage as a minimum in every industry, the reasonable reduction of the hours of labor, the abolition of child labor and the attainment of poverty," Mr. Daniels said.

In the portion of his address devoted to Indian Affairs, Mr. Daniels said in part:

"It has often been said in the United States, somewhat facetiously, that the only one hundred per cent American is the Indian. All the rest of us, coming from all nations, are in that light aliens in the western hemisphere. In the early days of the colonies there were too few William Penns who recognized the rights of the Indians and who treated them as fellow human beings. Later, due to Indian wars, often provoked by land-hungry immigrants, a distinguished soldier, who had been engaged in war with fierce Indian tribes, declared in his unwise wrath, 'The only good Indian is a dead Indian.'"

OBJECT OF INTEREST

"The Indians in North America have been despoiled of their lands and driven from their hunting grounds, not in spite of a policy toward the Indian that brings no credit to our country, the Indian has persisted and today more than ever is the object of interest and consideration by thoughtful and humane men, who are seeking to secure for the Indian every right to which he is entitled. Association with the Indian shows that he is possessed of fundamental virtues, some of which his white neighbor might emulate. The Indian cooperatively few in number, and driven from pillar to post, is an integral part of our population. In the green asize this government will be judged by its attitude toward these fellow human beings among us."

At the 1934 Montezuma conference much of the time was shown in respect to the education of an Indian. A young man, a member of the Indian National Congress, in a speech, bearing the name of a young Indian, said in a section where a large number of Indians reside in Mexico, and friends, there is more interest in the Congress than in any other of the United States. When the federal government—inhumanity as many believe—decided to deport the Cherokee Indians from the beautiful mountain lands in western North Carolina to lands beyond the 'Father of Waters,' there was distress and protest among the Indians who loved every crag and peak, every mountain stream and valley in this land of the skies. Under military escort most of them were driven from their homes. The stories of their privations and sufferings that came to them as they were herded in the march through swamps reeking with malaria afford no pleasant reflections. "Many refused to go. These betook themselves to the inaccessible heights and caves in their mountains, and refused to surrender their rights to live in the land of their fathers. Their descendants abide with us now, and our government is belatedly undertaking to right some of the wrongs inflicted upon their courageous ancestors. Better educational opportunities and aid will bless them and make them increasingly a valuable element in the population of Western North Carolina."

A NEW UNDERSTANDING

"Not only in the United States, but in all the country south of the Rio Grande there is a new and better understanding of the part the Indian must play in the future of all the Americas. There is lack of understanding of the Indian, even among ethnologists, and those who have mistakenly thought more of the Indian as an ethnological study than as human beings of like passion and hopes as other peoples."

"The future of Mexico, Central and South America are largely related to the wise solution of the so-called Indian problem. Few people know, due to the lack of knowledge of the Indians to the South of us and the defective statistics, the large number of Indians in this hemisphere. Of the 100,000,000 people in Mexico, fourteen are full Indian or men with mixed Indian and European blood."

"The future of all countries having large Indian populations is, of course, dependent largely upon the education, the industry and the character of its original settlers. In most of them the influence of public policies and industry and education have been in the hands of the European conquerors and their descendants."

CHRISTIANITY

"In most of the Americas, with large Indian populations, the Spaniards brought Christianity with all its light and blessing, the printing press and the school and university. The Indians, early in most states accepted Christianity, but until recent years have not been generally trained in the schools. They have been tillers of the soil, the workers, who looked for guidance to the better educated whites."

"There was indeed a time, according to E. V. Gomez, when he was considered by some short-sighted sociologists as 'an intermediary between man and beast.' Such conception of the Indian, due to failure to recognize his true qualities, is responsible for the period when their backwardness was due to this treatment. In one country, an eminent authority, declared that in some period 'many Indians are an integral part of the great estate or properties of the farmers; they live on them and pass from one owner to another along with the property.'"

"As long as Indians were so regarded and so treated, who would expect them to advance?"

NEW DAY BECKONS

"In the United States, under the wise and informed leadership of John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs, a new and better day beckons to Indians of the United States. Mistakes of other days are being corrected and the Indian now stands on his own feet, conscious that the government understands his needs and is resolved to give him a fairer opportunity than he has known."

"In Mexico the Indian has found new and wider doors open to him. He has been assured of a chance for advancement. The Mexican government program calls for the building of 7,000 new school houses, the allocation of land to Indian farmers and a modern system of public health, together with a higher wage standard and better working conditions."

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels were tendered an informal luncheon at the Parkway Hotel Saturday noon, with some fifteen or twenty local people attending. Immediately after the luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Daniels left for a short trip to Sylva before returning to Asheville for the night.

Mr. Daniels told the group during the course of the luncheon that he had heard Secretary Ickes make the statement that work on the Parkway must begin immediately.

It is Mr. Daniels' personal opinion that the area now in the park proper is only the beginning of a tremendous park of this entire section. He also stated that he saw no reason why work shouldn't begin at once on the Parkway.

His Share

His highness, the hog, possesses 44 teeth, but the opossum has 50 teeth and knows how to use them. He is usually hungry and eats until he is stupefied.

Keep a Good Laxative always in your home

Among the necessities of home is a good, reliable laxative. Don't be without one! Do your best to prevent constipation. Don't neglect it until you feel any of its disagreeable symptoms come on. "We have used Theodore's Black-Draught for 21 years and have found it a very useful medicine that every family ought to have in their home," writes Mrs. Perry Hieck, of Belton, Texas. "I take Black-Draught for biliousness, constipation and other ills where a good laxative or purgative is needed. I have always found Black-Draught gives good results."

BLACK-DRAUGHT

The Sacrament of Holy Communion will be administered at the 11 o'clock service.

Bishop Gibbin will visit the Parish on Sunday, August 18th, for Confirmation. Any desirous of being confirmed on that date are requested to notify the Rector at once, and receive the necessary instruction.

Everybody is cordially invited to all our services.

WAYNESVILLE METHODIST

Paul Hardin, Jr., Pastor.

The church school assembles at 9:45 a. m. Mr. Hugh Sloan is the superintendent. A class for young men and young women of college age has been organized for the summer months and will meet in the pastor's study. Mr. Hardin is the teacher.

Church services, with sermons by the pastor, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The League meets at 7 in the evening. We are delighted with the increasing number of visitors at all our services. Make our church your church while you are in Waynesville. We are always glad to have you.

Farm Problems And Answers

Question: How can I control the worms in my tobacco?
Answer: The best known method for this damage is the insecticide meal bait. This is made by thoroughly mixing 50 pounds of meal with one pound of arsenate of lead. A small pinch of this mixture should be dropped in the center of each tobacco bud in the morning and the tobacco bud is open. Begin with the buds as early as possible after the buds are set and repeat every seven to ten days until the plants are mature. One peck or twelve pounds of this mixture will cover an acre of tobacco plants.

Question: Is it a good idea to cross breed poultry?
Answer: Cross breeding is becoming very popular with poultry producers. This crossing of breeds apparently steps up the vigor of the progeny and therefore gives a higher percentage of hatchlings, especially if purebred parents have been used. This is especially desirable in broiler production work. In relation to egg production, a first generation cross should be advantageous but should not be carried further.
