HERE and THERE BY HILDA WAY GWYN

According to the press—fog and rain dampened the ardor of the Easter Parade on Park Avenue—but not so on Main street in Waynesville with its glorious day of spring weather and cloudless skies—everyone was abroad. Among those seen in the local parade were: Alice Stringfield, looking particularly well in a grey dress, with grey accessories, top coat of navy, and corsage of pink roses—Mary Pauline Platt, in grey with gardenias—Susie Fisher, in becoming navy and white with corsage of orchids—Kiddie Ray in navy and wearing gardenias—Harriett Massie in rose and grey with corsage of roses—Josephine Coman Ferguson—stunning in navy with corsage of gardenias—Mrs. W. L. Hardin—just from Washington, in grey coat with orchid hat, and corsage of sweet peas—Margaret Stovall in bluish grey suit with grey accessories and corsage of gardenias—Hazeline Swift, in navy with yellow trimmings—Harriet Boyd in gay spring print with coat of navy—Joe Gay in golden brown swaggar suit—and little Linda Stringfield Sloan, ready for her christening service, dainty in her embroidered dress worn by her mother when she was her age. And like Park Avenue—navy blue and grey predominated.

would be a national asset and eventually a rift in the sky of international relations—she prefers the spring—as it is a general cleaning season—and a readjustment of household effects—I have been racking my brain to remember those forgotten articles I have borrowed—and above all else—if I have anything of Mildred's!

It is said that Washington was considerably taken back last Friday, when Chairman Fletcher, of the Republican Party stated that he was laying in a good supply of college professors for the coming presidential campaign—and he was in dead earnest—for he announced the personnel of the group. After all the kidding that the Democrats have had from the Brain Trust of the New Deal—it sounds like a joke—but Mr. Fletcher says that the group will make a "genuine analytical study" of the problems confronting this country—that it is not merely partisan—but for collecting basic information on which national policies may be formulated—and he takes a nice little shot at his honorable opponents—by stating that the professors engaged by the Republican party are not ambitious to be on the Federal Payroll in hopes of reforming the Universe.

The following regarding the needs of the Modern Girl—was sent to this column with the request that it be used herein—the story of the girl, to whom the real estate agent was trying to sell a home—and her answer was—"A Home?—What do I need with a Home?—I was born in a hospital—I was educated in a boarding school—I was married in a church—I spend my mornings on the golf course—my afternoons at the bridge table—my evenings at the movies—any spare time in my car—when I die I will be buried from the undertakers—all I need is a garage."

Mildred Crawford has offered a suggestion—or perhaps I should dignify it by terming it a recommendation—to be adopted through this column—Mildred says there are days and even weeks dedicated to the observance of practically everything under the sun—with one exception—that is a day for returning borrowed property—a Grand National Returning Day—her idea to wit—that one day be set aside—for taking an inventory of one's "Lars and Penates"—and upon finding any borrowed article return it once to rightful owner—She claims it would be the means of fostering a more kindly and neighborly sentiment—a more brotherly and sisterly love—that Well folks, I'm back on duty again, after being off a week. I went to other parts of the country for last week, and didn't get my picture run, but I'm atelling you right here and now, I never appreciated Old Haywood County as much in all my life as when I got back home. Why, folks, this is really God's Country.

We have everything here to make us happy, and contented. And those who ain't should be ashamed.

And I feel the same way about trading at Burgin's. Every time I go some where else I'm always tickled to death to go back to 'em. I can ask no more from them than what they are already doing.
