America At Cross Roads As To The Economic Security Of Farmer, Said

"The financially distressed people can no longer cut their way into new land frontiers and escape their economic troubles," Henry A. Caton, of Coshocton, Ohio, secretary of the National Grange, told members of the Pigeon Valley Grange Friday afternoon at Bethel.

The members of the Bethel Grange and their families gathered for a picnic dinner and program in the school auditorium. I. A. McLain, master of the local Grange, also spoke and introduced the speaker. Mr. Caldwell discussed the problems confronting the rural people of North Carolina and asked that the Pigeon Valley Grange discuss these issues in the coming meetings and be ready to help formulate the state Grange program this fall.

The national secretary spoke on "The Challenges Facing American." He stated that during many of the so called "panics," the people found escape in the unsettled lands of the west, but that the only frontiers remaining were those in the field of science and new ideas.

The speaker listed the following challenges which the people of America must attempt to solve: Equalization of handicaps of the economic groups; discovery of new uses of farm products; more equal distribution of the national income; the purchase of American made goods by Americans; more economical production and markets for farm products; a more adequate credit system; maintenance of organization among farmers, and a wider and more thorough youth program.

Mr. Caton said America is at the cross roads as far as the economic security of the individual farmer is concerned. He praised the work being done by various farm groups, especially the local units of the grange in making communities "better places in which to live." He said that the grange, as a national organization, was one of the most influential groups in the United States for carrying out programs which aid American farmers.

South American Animal Captured At Hardin Home

A new and interesting addition has been made to the zoo at the Balsam Fish Hatchery, through the courtesy of W. L. Hardin, Jr.

Several weeks ago Jake Davis discovered a strange looking animal cating from an old can on the property of Mr. and Mrs. Hardin in Belle Meade. The animal was caught in a brush pile by Davis and Bobby Hardin. In the course of time, after being prominently displayed, it was decided that the stranger was a manilla, a South American quadruped with a bony shell.

General belief is that a tourist picked the animal up in Mexico, or possibly Texas, and it was either released or escaped in this locality.

New Development Of Belle Meade Placed On Market

The owners of Belle Meade announced the opening of a further development of the subdivision, which adjoins the Waynesville Country Club. The new section is known as block "K" on Fairview drive, overlooking fairways Nos. 16 and 17 on the golf course.

The owners said that while these lots were being sold at auction today, that they will not impair nor will they conflict in any way with that portion of Belle Meade which is owned and approved by the Federal Housing Commission.

The statement was also made that while the lots in block "K" are equally attractive as many in the other part of the development, they do not have a restriction on this particular part of the lands requiring home builders to build homes of a minimum value of $3,500.

MILLION FROM VALUATION IS FELT IN BUDGET

About $230,000 To Be Paid On County's Indebtedness In Coming Year

The Haywood board of county commissioners will have put before them Monday, a budget for the coming year, which will require a tax rate of between $1.60 and $1.65, it was learned from good authority by The Mountaineer yesterday.

In all probability, the rate will be set at $1.65, or exactly thirty cents higher than the present rate.

The budget is completed with the exception of one item—the poor fund, and that is being held in obedience of an engineer's report regarding a heating plant for the county home. The last grand jury recommended that the commissioners install a heating plant. Heating engineers are now making a survey and estimated cost of installing a satisfactory system.

The indebtedness for the coming year will be some heavier than last year, approximately one million in valuation has been taken from the books, through errors, releases and adjustments. This one item raised the rate about ten cents.

More appropriations, and greater demands on the county treasury has resulted in the other twenty cents increase.

The budget last year was based on twenty-four million valuation, while this year's budget is based on a valuation of twenty-three millions.

From T. J. Cathey, auditor, it was learned that a 5-year bond issue is maturing this year, and something like $230,000 will be required to meet maturing bonds and interest during the coming fiscal year.

A month or so ago it was thought that a rate of $1.55 would be sufficient for the county, during the past ten days, it was found that the rate would have to be something like $1.65 to care for the needs.

A complete itemized statement will be published immediately after adoption of the budget.
