World Flight of Hughes Stimulates Plans for Transatlantic Air Route

Aviation Expert Foresees 500-Ton Airliners Which Carry Thousand Passengers in Near Future

By MAURICE MERRYFIELD International Illustrated News Writer

NEW YORK—Now that most of the publicity and fanfare which followed the flights of Howard Hughes and Douglas Corrigan has died away, it might be well to consider how much was actually accomplished by these space-spanning aviators.

So far as scientific achievement and aeronautical research was concerned, the feat of young Corrigan in hopping the Atlantic in a second-hand 1900 plane of 1929 vintage must be dismissed as pretty much a lucky stunt. Credit is due him for flying skill and courage, but the future of flying depends but little on such feats.

It is another matter, though, when one considers the carefully planned and charted flight of Hughes and his crew of four. This was no haphazard adventure but a well-schemed flight which should prove an impetus to regular commercial air service.

For many months various airplane manufacturers have been designing and drafting plans for huge airliners capable of carrying up to 100 passengers, a payload of 25,000 pounds, and cruising at a speed of 200 miles per hour or better. In the specifications outlined by Pan American Airways when they invited bids was the stipulation that these mighty ships must be able to make a sustained flight of at least 5,000 miles fully loaded.

Douglas, Sikorsky, Consolidated and Boeing companies have all submitted plans for this new mistress of the skyways. Aviation experts expect these titans of the air to be in regular operation within about four years, and such a noted expert as Igor Sikorsky has even predicted that "flying boats" of 500 to 1,000 tons, carrying several thousand passengers, could be successfully designed and built. This compares to a weight of about 100 tons for the new ships which Pan American is now considering and 40 tons for some already in operation.

Seek Higher Altitudes

Plans have already been released by the four companies competing for the bid advertised by Pan American and all are said to meet requirements. These giant flyers would have two decks, cabins for passengers in the wings, sun deck and nearly every luxury of the ocean liner besides being seven times faster.

Main problem which must be solved before ocean air service reaches its peak of efficiency is lifting these great craft up into the stratosphere. This is doubly important because of the saving in fuel and the increased speed resulting. At a height of 30,000 feet a plane can hurtle through space one-third faster than at sea level, according to mathematical charts of progression. Figuring on this basis, the airliner of the future capable of cruising seven miles above the earth's surface where the stratosphere begins might attain speeds of 400 and 450 miles per hour.

Such an eventuality is far from improbable and has long been the goal of aircraft designers because of the increased safety, speed and the economy of operation. Naturally there are a legion of mechanical problems to overcome before this ambition is realized, yet the progress of aeronautical science within the past decade has been such that air transports weighing several hundred tons, carrying upwards of 500 passengers, flying seven miles above sea level at speeds of 350 miles an hour, and crossing the Atlantic between breakfast and dinner are far less fantastic than the visions of Jules Verne.

Work On Parkway In County Scheduled To Start Before Long

Route From Wagon Road Gap To Tennessee Bald Included In Construction Program

Eleven miles of the Blue Ridge Parkway—from Wagon Road Gap to Tennessee Bald—the ridge on the Haywood and Transylvania line, is included in the construction program for which money is in hand, according to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who has informed state officials of the fact that $5,500,000 is in hand for construction work.

In all, the five and a half million appropriation is set aside to build 33 1/2 miles of the Parkway in this state.

Governor Hoey pointed out, when told of the funds on hand, that the highway and public works commission had obtained and already conveyed to the federal government, rights-of-way for part of the route. The commission is now obtaining rights-of-way for the remainder of the route, and should have this completed at an early date so there will be no delay in construction," Governor Hoey said.

The other sections on the route that have funds allocated for definite construction, includes eleven miles near Flowing Rock and seven miles near Buck Creek gap.

440 Enrolled At Crabtree School

The Crabtree school opened for its second year with a total enrollment of 440 pupils.

Following is a list of teachers and their grades: Mrs. Cleo Rogers, first grade; Miss Edith Long, first grade; Mrs. Louisa Boyd, second grade; Miss Emily Palmer, second grade; Miss Lorena Rogers, third grade; Miss Mary Davis, fourth grade; Mrs. Faye Messer, fifth grade; Mrs. Christine Harrell, sixth grade; Harley Francis, seventh grade.

The high school teachers are: Principal, S. E. Conatser, Miss Bernice McElhannon, Sam McCracken, Miss Mary Jo Hampton.

Several improvements have been made in and about the school this summer. One that everyone is especially proud of are the new curtains and beautiful scenery for the stage. There are complete indoor and outdoor scenes.

Crabtree people are grateful to all the business firms and merchants that made it possible for them to have the curtain.

Dr. Harkness Discusses World Peace At Rotary

Dr. Georgia Harkness, professor at Mt. Holyoke, discussed "World Peace" before the Rotary Club last Friday. Dr. Harkness has just completed a lecture and teaching course at Lake Junaluska, and is in demand over the country as both.

Although ordained, she does not want to become a pastor.

She favors a larger place of service for women in the church, both among the local congregations and from the standpoint of professional opportunity. She thinks the church, more than any other field, has banned women from full participation in denominational professional and economical leadership but is not belligerent about it.

Dr. Harkness is a poet and an author, and has written several books. Twenty-two visiting Rotarians attended last week.
