

BLACKIE BEAR

BLACKIE BEAR IS A LOT OF HELP
Story 78

Blackie the bear has a hard time without Jay Bird. And he has a pretty easy time along with him. It just shows how people can help each other. Blackie just finished his work and was sitting on his porch in the sun and smoking when Jay Bird came over and told Blackie about it, and then Blackie just leaned back at the door-post and laughed and laughed. Wasn't Blackie lucky? He had just been thinking where he would go for a supper tonight, and now here Jay Bird: "Go over and tell Mr. Man just wants to save him all that he was going to give for a donkey, and I reckon we can't as well take the pay."

Blackie expected to sleep today, said Blackie, but with such a frolic as in front of us, I guess we will complain about being waked and so they started on their trip to Mr. Man's house.

Blackie's no use telling you much what went on over there for Blackie. Jay Bird says it is that everybody took his time, and as for apples and turnips and things till they couldn't eat any more. And then filled their bags with things and started out for Mr. Man's house. Since they didn't get the wagon, they didn't get a very heavy things, but they were heavy enough to keep them from getting hungry for several days.

While they were having supper at Blackie's house, Dr. Coon said: "Blackie's always a good side to me. Uncle Joe has been very upset because we had a fire at his house that night; and when he hears about our little trip over at Mr. Man's, he will like he has company, and I'll bet him a heap less."

Mountain Joe ...

This week I ran across a group of playwood boys from Fort Jackson, who had come back home for a week-end visit. They all looked like they were enjoying their training in the Army.

I have been for this preparedness program all the time, although I hope we don't have to do more than be prepared. Maybe some of those European countries see we are able to defend ourselves that they will readily see their way clear to stay in their own homes.

And speaking of being prepared, the Burgin Boys have been preparing for a long time to take care of your winter needs in every department. There is no need putting it off any longer. Just come today and see for yourself that our prices at Burgin's on high quality merchandise are right.
