"EVERY DOG HAS HIS DAY"

Story 99

Everybody has heard the old saying that "every dog has his day." Hound Dog not only had his day but he had a whole week.
When he came home on Sunday afternoon all muddled up and looking so tired and wet, Aunt Lindy heated a boiler of water and had Tom give him a good bath, and then brush his hair out all nice and straight. And then Tom went out to the little crib and brought an armful of nice new hay and put it in Hound Dog's house for him to sleep on.

Aunt Lindy called him up to the kitchen steps and gave him a plate piled up with good supper, and a piece of the new ham bone

Broadening Christian Horizons—Peter's Vision

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 5-24

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 25 is Acts 10:1-11:18, the Golden Text being Acts 10:34, "And Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons.")

SIMON, whom Jesus had called Peter, the Rock, had gone to Joppa, after Saul had been driven from Jerusalem by threats on his life. There Peter had raised up a woman, Tabitha or Dorcas, from the dead.

At Caesarea, 30 miles south of Joppa, lived a Roman captain or centurion, who was commander of 100 men, Roman soldiers who were supposed to maintain order among the conquered people, the Jews. This captain, Cornelius, was a devout man, one that feared God with all his house, and gave charity to the people of the city.

About 3 o'clock one afternoon, while Cornelius was praying, he had a vision. An angel of God appeared to him, calling him by name. Cornelius was afraid and asked "What is it, Lord?" The angel answered that Cornelius' prayers and aims had pleased and been accepted by the Lord, and that he was directed to send men to Joppa, instructing them to look for the house of a tanner named Simon, and to ask at his house for one Simon whose surname was Peter.

Sends Three to Joppa

When the angel had departed, Cornelius called to him two of his servants and a soldier he could trust, and told them what they must do, so the three started for Joppa.

As these men neared Joppa, Peter, who of course knew nothing about Cornelius or his messengers, went up on the flat house-top to pray. As it was nearly dinner time, Peter became very hungry, and he fell into a trance and had a vision. In his vision Peter saw a sheet which was let down from heaven by its four corners.
In the sheet Peter saw all manner of beasts, birds and creeping things. A voice told the hungry Peter to kill and eat. Shocked, Peter, who had been brought up as a Jew in the strict Levitical law, answered, "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean."

"And the voice spake unto him again the second time. What God hath cleansed, that call not thou unclean." At that the sheet was drawn up again into heaven and Peter was left wondering what the vision meant.

At that moment Cornelius' messengers were at the door, asking down at the bottom. Hound Dog had eaten so much old ham at dinner that he didn't have much room for a new ham or for nice biscuits or anything else, so he just minced over his supper till he came to the ham bone. Never in his life had he left a ham bone till it was gnawed clean, no matter how much else he had eaten, and so he took the bone in his mouth and started back to his house.

Aunt Lindy saw how little of his supper he had eaten, and as he went away she said to Tom:

"Poor dog, from the way he has been hunting that animal all day, I thought he would be terribly hungry, but I reckon he is just too tired to eat. I know how he feels, for I have been just that way myself. And then I know he is right sore where those awful strings were tied on him last night.
Well, we will keep him lying around the house for a few days, and doctor him up, and we won't let him hunt any more till he feels better.
Go and shut his door so no one can get in his house and so he can't get out. He is such a smart dog that he would hunt out to catch anything, no matter how sick he is, and so we must take care of him.

After Hound Dog had gone to bed, Aunt Lindy and Tom settled themselves for some talk, and you don't need to be told what they talked about. Blackie is in the mind of these good people just as regularly as their meals are, and they certainly had him in mind tonight. Never again could anything happen around that place that didn't look or sound like Blackie Bear. Maybe Blackie, himself, didn't have a hand in it, but his friend, "The Robber, or the Stranger Animal" certainly did, and so everything was charged to Blackie, and he was talked about in the cabin long after Hound Dog was sound asleep.
