

Navajo Indians From West Come To See "Tall Chief" W. T. Shelton

Members of the esteem which the Navajo Indian hold of W. T. Shelton, their "Tall Chief" for 16 years, had by the fact that they stopped off here last week en route to Washington to receive a tribal mat-

Rules Of The Road

ON DECREASING SPEED

Sec. 102, Motor Vehicle Laws of North Carolina:—"(c) The fact that the speed of the vehicle is lower than the . . . prima facie limits shall not relieve the driver from the duty to decrease speed when approaching and crossing an intersection, when approaching and going around a curve, when approaching a hill crest, when traveling upon any narrow or winding roadway, or when special hazard exists with respect to pedestrians or other traffic or by reason of weather or highway conditions, and speed shall be decreased as may be necessary to avoid colliding with any person, vehicle or other conveyance on or entering the highway in compliance with legal requirements and the duty of all persons to use due care."

was on the reservation. The two recalled riding 45 miles on horseback to attend an Indian wedding.

Donald Washburn, the youngest in the group, was impressed with the vegetation on the mountains of this area. The two older men, Slim Yabine and Tes Nospas, kept insisting that the interpreter impress on the group that Mr. Shelton was their friend—and always had been.

Efforts to get the two older men to put on a native dance, with the tribal war songs, failed, as they claimed they were too tired. Then it was that Sam, the interpreter, said the noise was "too great," and told the story of a group of northern school teachers, all old maids, he ventured, who visited the reservation one summer, and were very much put out that the hotel could not give each one a private room. The management did the best he could, and put two in a room, and that night the Navajos, as is their custom, staged one of their native dances with the war songs for the tourists, and after it was over, and with the blood-curdling cries still ringing in their ears, the teachers in a body demanded of the management that all be allowed to sleep in one room. The group here the week-end did not get to see the dance or hear the songs.

The group visited the Cherokee Reservation and met the chief and officials there. They left Saturday for Washington, and said they planned to come back this way on their way back home in New Mexico.

America's Young Men And Women Who Are Working For Defense, Need U. S. O. Facilities, Rev. R. E. McBlain Says

"This nation is in need of moral rearmament as well as improving our military defenses," Rev. R. E. McBlain, rector of Grace Episcopal church told Rotarians here Friday, as he discussed the importance of the United Service Organizations.

"There is no use of the preachers preaching moral rearmament from the pulpits if the young men in our training camps are going on a moral disarmament campaign," he said. "U. S. O. will provide for a moral and spiritual rearmament of our young men and women who are now engaged in defense work, whether in camps, or industrial centers."

"This program of providing for them wholesome entertainment and recreation facilities must be done now. It can't wait, because by then our young folks will have gone to hell," he said.

The speaker cited several instances, where he had received the information direct, of the "moral let down" in and near some of the camps. "Away from the camps, and in short distances where the men can go during their free time, there are hundreds of women waiting for the men. In some instances where rooms are not available, trailer centers have sprung up where these women induce the young men."

"What U. S. O. proposes to do, is to provide recreation and amusement that will keep a lot of men from such places. The government will provide housing facilities for the U. S. O. to operate at each camp."

"A man who supports the program of U. S. O. is giving his vote of confidence to young men and women, with the idea to build up their morale and moral lives."

"I know of no more important fund than that which will help our young people," the speaker continued.

"I have enough confidence in our young men and women to believe that if they are given the opportunity to go to the right place that they'll go there."

"This is an urgent appeal, and those of us back home and here in Haywood, must show that we have $500 worth of confidence in our young men and women by contributing to the national fund which will be used in providing for these wholesome programs."

Charles Ray, county chairman, made a few brief remarks about the campaign in Haywood. The speaker was introduced by J. Dale Stentz.
