Observe 25th Wedding Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. GROVER C. DAVIS, who observed their 25th wedding anniversary here last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Entertain On Silver Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Davis were at home to their friends and families on Saturday afternoon and evening at their residence on Walnut street in observance of the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Several hundred guests called during the appointed hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis have resided in Waynesville since their marriage in 1916. They are both members of prominent Haywood county families. Mrs. Davis was prior to her marriage, Miss Jessie McCrary, daughter of Mrs. Callie McCrary and the late W. F. McCrary. Mr. Davis is an attorney at law, having been admitted to the bar in 1913. During their 25 years residence here, Mr. and Mrs. Davis have been active in the religious, civic and social life of the community.

In the receiving line with the hosts on Saturday were: their two sons, Dr. Grover M. Davis and Joe Davis, student at the University of North Carolina, Mrs. A. C. Brosley, Mrs. D. R. Baldwin, Mrs. Moody Davis, Harry Davis, Moody Davis, Joe Davis, Mrs. J. V. Noland and Mr. and Mrs. Lee F. Davis.

Mrs. N. M. Medford, Miss Louise Campbell, and Mrs. Zeb Curtis, greeted the guests in the entrance hall.

Directing the guests to the various rooms throughout the house were: Mrs. S. P. Gay, Mrs. T. N. Howell, Mrs. J. R. Hipps, Mrs. Carl Boutwell, Miss Edna Boyd, and Miss Mattie Moody.

Serving punch were: Mrs. Owen Jaynes, Miss Betty Lou Russell, Miss Bebe Medford, and Miss Carolyn Curtis.

Receiving in the dining room were: Mrs. Marion Green, Mrs. Harry Davis, Mrs. Frank Davis, Mrs. C. B. McCrary, and Mrs. Mark Galloway. Assisting in serving here were the following nieces of Mrs. Davis: Miss Lorena McCrary, Miss Kathryn McCrary, Miss Eva Noland, Miss Callie Ellen Noland, Miss Audrey Noland, and Miss Laura Mae Green.

Mrs. T. L. Bramlett and Miss Louise Campbell were in charge of the registration book. Receiving in the gift room were, Mrs. E. K. McGee and Miss Mary Davis.

Quantities of pink and white roses, delphiniums, snapdragons, and sweet peas were used throughout the house. Large baskets of pink rhododendron were advantageously placed about the rooms.

The table from which punch was served was covered with a lace cloth and decorated with pink and white snapdragons, and sweetpeas in similar tints.

In the dining room the bridal motif was observed throughout the appointments. The central table was covered with a handsome cloth and centered with a three tier cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Crystal holders containing long white tapers were used at the four corners. Crystal bowls of mixed white flowers also adorned the table.

During the afternoon a musical program was rendered, which included two numbers by Miss Joan Witt, of Canton, "I Love You Truly" and "Sweethearts." She was accompanied by Mrs. Frank Mease, also of Canton. Mrs. Fred Calhoun accompanied by her mother, Mrs. W. L. Matney, sang "A Perfect Day" and "At Dawning."

Mr. and Mrs. Davis were recipients of many beautiful gifts of silver and hundreds of messages of felicitations on the happy occasion of their 25th anniversary.

Friends all over the county with the following out-of-town guests were present: Mrs. Christopher Crittenden, of Raleigh, Mr. and Mrs. Lee F. Davis, of Richmond, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Moody Davis, of Leaksville, Mrs. D. R. Balwin, of Alcoa, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, of Leaksville, and Mrs. A. C. Brosley, of Dallas, Texas. The guest also included a large number from Canton and Clyde.

Mrs. Lowe Allen, Mrs. Fred Farmer and small daughter, Winnie Ruth, and Mrs. Blanche Allen Franklin and son, Donald, returned on Tuesday after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Farmer at Newport News, Va.

Hazelwood Church Has Bible School

A daily vacation Bible school, sponsored by the Hazelwood Methodist church, is being held each afternoon, except Saturday, at the church between 2:30 and 4 o'clock. Harris Kesler, of the Divinity school, of Duke University, is conducting the school.

He is being assisted by Lewistine McCoy, also of Duke. Mrs. W. L. Hutchins, of Waynesville, Miss Virginia Whitner, Miss Virginia Greer, Mrs. B. M. Smith, Mrs. Frank Jenkins, Miss Nancy Winchester, Miss Dorothy Johnson, and Mrs. Vernon Truett.

All of the children of the Hazelwood community are cordially invited to attend the school. Mr. Kesler, whose home is at Roanoke, Virginia, is stopping at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Whitner and will work in the community the remainder of the summer.

HEE-HAW CALLS ON BLACKIE

Story 102

You wouldn't have to go very far before you find him, if you started out to find a man who is all the time stumbling into bad luck. He will tell you that more bad things can happen to him than to anybody else in the world, and he will have a good time telling you about the last bad thing that happened to him, if you will just sit and listen to him.

But you wouldn't hear any such talk around Blackie's house if you visited him for a month. He and all his friends believe that "it might have been worse," and he always says so when something that isn't very good happens to any of them. And they are always finding where two good things happen at the same time, and just fit into each other so as to make everything work out fine. And right here is one of those times.

"Just look at all this nice hay that has grown up between the peanut rows." Mrs. Man said to Mr. Man, when she went out to see how he happened to count six bags of peanuts where there were only five. "There isn't a bit of sense in letting it all go to waste, when it might feed Hee-Haw for days and days if you would turn him in on it at night when he doesn't have any work to do. The you wouldn't have to give him any supper."

And that's how it "happened" that Hee-Haw wasn't shut up and locked in his house that night, but was turned out in the peanut field to eat grass and peanut vines for his supper and breakfast.

If you get in an awful hurry to get out to a ball game or to go to a party, it doesn't take you near all day to eat your breakfast or lunch, and if there is something that you want to do at night, and it will take till away after your regular bedtime to get through with it, you don't worry a bit about losing a little sleep. And it was just both of those ways with Hee-Haw last night.

Before it was dark he had eaten every bit of supper he wanted and had worked his way down to the back field, and clear away from the house. And before his good folks had finished supper he had found a low place in the fence and had jumped over it and was trotting through the woods toward a mighty big tree where he expected to find some howdy, and to hear a lot of folks talk, and maybe do a little bit of it himself.

So it just "happened" that soon after Blackie and the boys had finished supper, and were sitting out under the big maple tree that had dropped enough leaves on the ground to make about the prettiest carpet you ever saw, they heard a "plunk, plunk, plunk," coming down the hill, and there came Hee-Haw. You are just right when you think he got a lot of howdy, for he did. And that isn't all he got. Only that morning Jocko and Blackie had been talking about how much better that last lot of smoking tobacco was, and how they would like for Hee-Haw to get a pipe full of it. And you would have laughed almost as much as Hee-Haw did if you had seen the pipe that Jocko had made for him. He expected Hee-Haw to come again before long, for it had been a long time since he had made them a visit, and he had made a pipe that was even bigger than Blackie's.

He bored the pipe out of the biggest corn cob there was in the lot that came from Mr. Man's house in the wagon, and grabbed down in the creek and pulled up a cane root as long as a yardstick, and had made a stem for the pipe, and really it was a sight. And it was no wonder that Hee-Haw smoked it so hard that he wasn't near through telling them all he wanted to when the moon got so low that he said he must be going before it got so dark. Yes, he was in his field next morning and Mr. Man doesn't know yet that he went visiting.

Waynesville School Teacher Tells Experiences Of Working A Week On A Newspaper

Editor's note:—While a member of The Mountaineer staff was on vacation, Mrs. Martha Mock Medford acted as substitute, and for a week, was in the rush that goes with publishing a newspaper. Here she tells her story.

A great newspaper man once said that there are three kinds of people in the world: those who want to write, those who think they can write better than those who do, and those who write.

If the people who belong in the first two classifications spent a few days in a newspaper office they would come out with a new respect for those in the third group.

In the first place, newspaper work is the most "everlasting" business we ever saw. It is never finished. Whether it is a big daily or a little town weekly, it is time to start getting out another paper just as soon as one is on the presses. The only other business we know that approximate it in deadly routine is housekeeping—and in that a woman can drag her unwilling spouse out for a steak every now and then.

In college we dimly remember studying a theory about "the microcosm"—something about every thing in the universe being reproduced in miniature. Anyway, a newspaper office is it. It seems to us that every kind of person in the world comes in during the course of a day—the selfish, the kind, the know-it-all, the humble. And when the public and publicity come face to face, all pretense drop away. People show up for what they are.

It is interesting to watch what happens when a person who expresses himself quite well in words comes into contact with a pencil and paper. He becomes as inarticulate as a child. It's much easier to say what you mean than to condense it into a twenty-five word want-ad, for example.

We always understand that doctors and preachers tie for first place when it comes to getting paid last. We should like to nominate newspapers to head the list. From the modish lady who takes her dollar and a half out of a smart leather purse to the farmer who pulls his out of his overalls pocket, they all say that they have been intending to come in every day to pay for their subscription.

In whatever profession, most people have a quiet corner somewhere to which they can go for some good constructive thinking. From the editor down to the least tion we ever saw. And although its workings are still a great mystery to us, we were amazed to discover that this big machine take little bars of lead, melts them, and molds them to form the letters for the print.

We regret to state that we were formerly under the impression that a linotype machine worked on the principle of the typewriter.
