

Bethel Students Enjoying Use Of Electric Machinery

The thrill that comes through the use of power and tools was experienced by a number of the agriculture boys at the Bethel high school for the first time last week, when the power was turned on in the new auditorium. The 9th, 10th and 11th grades are being permitted to use the electric machinery, each boy obtaining a written permit from home for this privilege.

The machinery was purchased by the government last spring for the five defense classes, as well as a number of the tools.

The class room furniture and chairs being made by the students will be finished by next week.

At the last meeting of the group the following committees were appointed by the president: supervised practice, Billie Hall, Way Mease, and Chester Mease; cooperative activities, Norville Deaver, Way Mease, Norman Maples; leadership, Chester Mease, Hugh Bumgarner, Chester Sellers.

Earnings and savings: Harmon Erwin, Max Burnette, Joyce Henson; conductor of meetings, Hugh Bumgarner, J. L. West, Francis Boger; scholarship, Way Mease, Wilson Caldwell, Norville Deaver; recreation, D. B. Queen, Billie Cogdill and John West; publicity, Wilson Caldwell, Boyd Medford and Floyd Sharpe.

"Next to Hitlerism the greatest menace that affects America today is the subversive influence of the Lindberghs and the Nyes," said William H. Smathers, native of Waynesville, now resident of Atlantic City, and U. S. Senator from his adopted state, in a stirring speech at the New Jersey State Democratic convention held last week in Trenton.

"As prominent Americans," said the Senator, "they preach and practice continually German propaganda for the sole purpose of destroying the morale of our American soldiers and undermining the confidence of the American people in their government and in their commander-in-chief."

Senator Smathers coupled his charge against the two isolationist leaders, Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Gerald P. Nye, with a prediction of defeat for Germany and Italy.

Smathers, a consistent backer of administration policies, said President Roosevelt "is not to be defeated or destroyed by such 'scoundrels' as the Lindberghs, the Nyes and other isolationists whom history will bury in ignominious oblivion."

"While on the other hand," he continued, "Franklin D. Roosevelt, with the aid of Churchill and other fearless leaders of the Old and New World, will bring about the ultimate defeat of the dictators."

In the United States, as in England, Smathers said, "the Chamberlains were in power when President Roosevelt first began to warn the American people of the dictator menace."

Wasting Huge Sums "While America wandered in the wilderness of appeasement, inaction and isolationism," he added, "she was also wasting huge sums of money and precious time and materials. During that crucial period, history was made in America of a character not creditable to the sons and daughters of Valley Forge, because America hesitated, debated and divided on her attitude toward a world conflict which not only involved her own life and liberties, but the life and liberties of the civilized world."

Enactment of the Lend-Lease Act for aiding Britain, Smathers declared, ended a period of indecision and "epitomized and reassertion of America's mighty influence and her lofty independence in world affairs."

"By the same act," he added, "America re-established her traditional rights to the freedom of the sea—defended and battled for by every President from Washington to Wilson."

The New Jersey Senator declared that the future of America rests jointly in the hands of Roosevelt and Churchill.

"... through all the fright and hysteria, through all the chaos and confusion," Senator Smathers said, "there have been and still are just two men in the whole world who were neither fooled by nor afraid of the bullying dictators. One was the immitable and invincible Winston Churchill. Had his warnings been heeded, Europe's magnificent cities and buildings would not today be reduced to ashes and ruins. Neither would her peaceful and liberty-loving people be reduced to starvation and slavery."

Several of the prize winning 4-H Club baby beeves, which took honors at the Haywood Livestock Show and at the Western North Carolina Fair will go on sale here this week-end.

Haywood business men bought eight of the Haywood calves at the annual sale conducted at the Hendersonville fair, and here in Waynesville the prize beef will be sold a C. E. Ray's Sons and The Food Store.

As at all such sales, higher prices were paid for the prize winners than the open market affords. This was done to encourage the boys, and to help reimburse them for the extra expense involved in raising such fine cattle. The firms selling the beef are offering it at less than cost, although the price is above that of standard grades of beef, it was pointed out.

"The premium prices for the premium beef will not let the markets come out with a profit," the county agents said. "These markets cooperating with the farmers in this instance is encouragement and a boost for the stockraiser to raise better stock."

Interest in the sale of the premium beef led some market managers to believe that the supply would be exhausted by early Saturday morning.

WWNC Cafe has stocked up on the premium beef and will serve it this week-end.

Alvin Chasin Heads Bethel 4-H Group

Alvin Chasin is president of the Bethel 4-H club this year, with Eloise West serving as vice president and Frances West secretary.

Frances Wells is song leader of the group.

The club was recently organized, and plans for the year discussed with members of the county leaders.

The club named the following as a program committee: Doris Medford, Carrel Allen and Marilyn Medford.

The finance committee of the club is composed of Boyd Medford, T. J. Powell and Irene Farmer.

warnings of the other fearless leader—Franklin D. Roosevelt—had been heeded, the destructive dictators would have been quarantined and imprisoned in their own lands."

Senator Smathers told the convention that "to these two great men—Roosevelt and Churchill—who had the vision to see and the courage to act, we owe our security today. In the hands of these two great men rests the future of America, the liberty and freedom of the American people, and the future of all democracies throughout the world."

"Their leadership has brought us to a point where we are prepared to resist enslavement," Smathers declared, "and their continued leadership will bring about the destruction of Hitlerism."

Sen. Smathers also lashed out at Representative Eaton, keynote speaker at the Republican state convention last week, who Smathers said had stated that Republicans were in favor of the President's foreign policy.

"Rep. Eaton is no more for the President's foreign policy than Hitler's for our foreign policy," Smathers declared. "If you doubt what I say, look up his record and you'll find he voted against lifting the Lend-Lease act, the repeal of the draft and the repeal of the Espionage Act that went into effect last week."

Huge Power Project Will Bring Many Visitors To Jackson County Site On Monday

The new Glenville dam of the Aluminum Company of America will be formally dedicated on Monday, October 13, with Governor Broughton making the chief address.

The exercises will be held at the site of the Jackson county dam at 1:15 o'clock, and the general public is invited.

The ceremony will signalize the capture, in the Jackson county area of 30,000 h. p. to be transmitted as electric energy to the huge aluminum works at Alcoa, Tenn., and there used to add 11,000,000 pounds to the nation's annual production of aluminum.

Attending the exercises will be a large group of distinguished engineers, business men and public officials. D. Hiden Ramsey, general manager of the Asheville Citizen Times Company, will introduce the governor.

Following the program at Glenville, a trip will be made to Nantahala to view the power development there, which is expected to be completed early next summer.

The two dams, newest units in the Aluminum company's hydroelectric development of the Little Tennessee river system, have a number of interesting features. The Glenville project's gross head of 1,215 feet is the highest east of the Rockies, while the Nantahala dam, rising 250 feet above its stream bed, will be the highest rock and earth fill dam east of the Mississippi. Its maximum head of 1,005.0 feet will be the second highest in the Eastern United States.

Water from the Glenville reservoir will have a pressure of more than 500 pounds per square inch. The turbines are at the powerhouse, three miles downstream. Connected with an Allis-Chalmers 50 cycle, three phase generator, it will create electric energy to be transmitted over 37 miles of high tension lines to Nantahala, and thence to Santealah and to Alcoa, site of America's largest aluminum producing works.

To reach the power house water from the dam will pass through three and a half miles of steel pipe and tunnels drilled through mountains of rock.

The dam will create a 1,400 acre lake to be filled from the water of a 40 square mile drainage area. The dam consists of two parts, the main dam across the channel of the west fork of Tuckasee river, and a saddle dam across a saddle in the hills just to the left of the main dam.

The main dam is 150 feet high, about 900 feet long, and more than 800 feet thick at the base. In the two Glenville dams is a combined total of 1,300,000 cubic yards of rock and earth.

Construction of the Glenville and Nantahala dams, both begun in July, 1940, wrote finis to the history of two communities: The old village of Affuene, in Macon county had to be razed when work was begun at the Nantahala development. The site of the community will be 100 feet under waters of the lake to be created by the Nantahala dam. The village of Glenville in the Glenville reservoir likewise was razed.

At Glenville, 1,155,800 pounds of dynamite was used in tunnel boring and mountain smashing, while a new blasting record was set at Nantahala when experts of the Atlas Power company fired 70 tons of explosives at the dam site.

The Nantahala dam, which will create 60,000 h. p., will be 350 feet high, 1,080 feet long, and will be 1,000 feet thick through the base. When it is completed, more than 2,000,000 yards of material will have gone into its construction. Piled between mountains, it will create a 1,631-acre lake, controlling a drainage area of 90 square miles.

Work progress on the two jobs called for a rising peak of employment, then a gradual dropping off toward their completion, officials explained. At Nantahala, the crest of employment exceeded 1,700 men, more than 1,200 of whom were nolds, of Canton, and five grandchildren.
