Successful Revival Is Being Held At Lumber Camp

The revival services which are being conducted under the auspices of the mountain division of the Salvation Army at the Citadel and at the chapel of the Grace Lumber Company are well attended according to the workers.

Due to the inclement weather operations at the lumber camp were closed several days during the week and the attendance at the meeting has been quite large. On Sunday night there were four conversions.

Jesus the Messiah Foretells His Death

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 3-21

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 22 is Matthew 16:13-28; Mark 8:27-37; Luke 9:18-25, the Golden Text being Mark 8:35. "For whosoever would save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it.")

WE SPEND our Sunday school hour today with Jesus and His disciples. The latter had accompanied the Master to the villages of Caesarea Philippi which our commentator says "were distinguished from that upon the coast of the Mediterranean, as Caesarea Philippi. It was in Philip's tetrarchy, and had recently been rebuilt by Philip and named after Augustus." This place was the farthest north in Palestine reached by Jesus during His life.

The Master first asked the disciples who the people thought He was. He knew He was a much discussed person, and as the Jews were always looking for the Messiah, who was to come and reign as prophet, priest and king, on an earthly throne for ever more. Jesus was very much interested to know what was said concerning Him and who the people to whom He preached thought He was. Some of the disciples said He was thought to be John the Baptist, others thought He was Elijah, and still others conjectured that He was one of the other prophets come back. Then Jesus asked them directly, "But who say ye that I am?" Peter, the ready speaker, answered at once, "Thou art the Christ."

Answer Pleased Jesus

The answer pleased Jesus who knew then that these men who were so closely associated with Him and who would carry on the work when He was on earth no longer, understood the truth. He commended Peter for his answer and told him that God only could have revealed it to him, but warned the disciples to tell no one.

He felt then that the time had come to tell these associates of His of His coming trial, death and resurrection. Even though they knew He was the Christ, it must have been a severe shock to hear about the suffering to come of this Christ whom they so loved. Peter answered quickly, aside to his Lord, "Be it far from Thee, Lord: this shall not be unto Thee." He was immediately rebuked by Jesus, who said, "Get thee behind me Satan: thou art an offence unto Me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men."

The rebuke seemed extreme after the praise just bestowed upon Peter. Undoubtedly Jesus did not mean that Peter was evil, but that He, like Satan, was tempting his Lord, to whom, in His earthly body, the sufferings to come would be great. The Master then told the disciples what was the supreme test of a Christian, or follower of His.

"If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

The life of the follower of Jesus, then, is sacrifice. He must shoulder his cross, and follow in the footsteps of the Master. He must not so enjoy the good things of this world that he forgets that there is something far more important. For if he does, he will find that he has lost the really good things of life—those of the spirit—and what he has is dust and ashes in his mouth.

The soul of man is the important part of him. He may go through untold suffering here, but if he keep steadfast and true, stepping in the footsteps of his Master even unto death, he "need fear no ill," for the Lord will be with him, and he will be comforted and crowned with "eternal life."
