The heavy frost, and low temperatures over the weekend apparently did not damage the apple trees of late varieties.

Some of the earlier varieties were damaged, and plums in most sections were killed and pears injured. The larger orchards, with almost all later variety trees, did not suffer much damage, as far as could be ascertained. County Agent Howard Clapp said, he had checked trees in several sections of the county, and found the damage "very slight," as far as appearances now outward

The heavy frost and freeze over the week-end played havoc with the early gardens in the county, it was learned from several sources.

Even the hardy radishes were reported nipped in certain areas, the damage being greatest in exposed places. A number of gardeners have reported damaged crops of
