

Farm Groups To Pledge Support To War Effort

Increased purchases of War Bonds and Stamps.

6. Ration all essential commodities that are scarce.

7. Discourage installment buying; encourage payment of all debts.

What This 7-Point Program Is Designed To Do

Prevent a few from getting rich at the expense of many.

Permit all to share alike in goods.

Help prevent a serious depression after the war such as that which paralyzed America following World War I.

Maintain insofar as possible desirable living conditions to which our soldiers can return after winning the fight for America's freedom.

Cause much of the war debt to be paid as we go.

Help control the cost of living.

How Inflation Affects Farmers

Inflation makes farmers think they have more buying power than they really have.

Inflation tends to get farmers into debt for things they cannot pay for quickly.

Inflation gets farmers into the habit of living above their income.

Inflation increases taxes and public debt.

Inflation reduces tendencies to save; it discourages thrift.

Inflation establishes prices higher than normal causing farmers to adjust their spending to a level which they cannot maintain.

Inflation means higher prices which make it hard for low income families to buy what they need.

Inflation makes dollars cheaper. They will not buy as much. Therefore, we have to borrow, and mortgage the future for a much longer time.

Painter's Low Bid Provides Mystery

LOWELL, Mass. — Postmaster Charles H. Slowey still is puzzled how a San Antonio, Texas, painter can afford to travel 1,600 miles here, paint 300 mail boxes and return home—at a profit. The Texan—Arthur T. Castle—recently was awarded a contract to paint the boxes at a total cost of $74.45.

J. R. Brinkley, Goat Gland Doctor, Dies; Made Fortune "Rejuvenating" Folks

"Dr." John R. Brinkley, gland surgeon and former Kansas gubernatorial candidate, died in San Antonio, Texas, last week at the age of 56. He had been in poor health since the amputation of a leg several months ago.

He made a fortune selling his goat-gland operation over the radio to thousands of men and women who turned to his hospitals as a modern Fountain of Youth. But investigators of the Journal of the American Medical Association delved into his past and raised doubts as to whether the counter-part of the old-time medicine man was really a physician at all. In the end, in 1941, he was adjudged a bankrupt by a federal court.

He was born at Beta, N. C., and was for a time a telegraph operator. In 1908 he entered the Bennett Medical College in Chicago, but left in 1911 without graduating. In 1915 he received a diploma from the Eclectic Medical University at Kansas City, Mo., which was not recognized by forty states and ceased to exist in 1928.

In 1919 he got a diploma from the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery, but it was charged that the college was a "diploma mill." With its backing, however, he was enabled to start preaching the advantages of rejuvenation by grafting the glands of goats on the human body. He first performed operations of this type in Chicago.

In 1924, he went to Italy and managed to get a worthwhile diploma from the University of Pavia, but the degree was annulled when the university learned of his history.

He went to Milford, Kan., and started his rejuvenation business in a big way, organizing the Brinkley-Jones Hospital, the Brinkley-Jones Associates, the Brinkley Research Laboratories and the Brinkley Training School for Nurses.

At the same time he started the radio station KFKB (Kansas First, Kansas Best), and poured out a torrent of Fundamentalist theology, interspersed with rejuvenation advertising. He sold a gland emulsion at $100 for a month's supply. Operations cost $750.

In 1930 the Kansas Medical Board revoked his physician's license and the federal radio commission refused to renew his broadcasting license. Angry, he ran for governor of Kansas, polling 183,000 votes that year, 244,607 in 1932, but much less in 1934.
