In order to conserve space on ships and planes, and to speed up letters to and from men on foreign soil, the war department has devised means of photographing letters both in this country and in other countries, and a small roll of film can carry the photographed letters sufficient to fill three mail bags. The first of such letters seen by the newspaper, was from Corp. Wayne McCracken, airplane member somewhere in England. The letter was a picture of what he had written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howell McCracken. The letter was 20 days in reaching here. Traffic Count In Park Suspended

Elimination of the Civilian Conservation Corps as a nondefensive measure will end the travel count of visitors to the park until such time as funds are made available to operate the three checking stations which up to now have been manned by CCC enrollees.

Park rangers cannot be spared for these duties since it is of paramount importance that full protection be given to wild life and forest values in the park area.

Now that many forms of wild life have shown a favorable increase in numbers, and previously disturbed woodland areas are gradually reverting to original stands, vigorous protection will continue to be given to such park values. Second only to the matter of saving human life in National Park is the conservation of its natural resources.
