

Haywood Boy Wins Essay Contest In County District

Essay Written By Carmel Hollingsworth Judged Best In 38 Counties By Cotton Cooperative.

Carmel Hollingsworth, of Waynesville, has been declared a district winner in the annual co-operative essay contest, sponsored by the C. Cotton Co-operative Association in Raleigh.

Hollingsworth has received a diploma of $10 and will now compete with the winners of the four districts for the grand prize of $100 in cash.

Writing on the subject "The Value of Farmer Co-operative in the World Crisis," Hollingsworth said, "The farmers today are in a better shape to meet the needs of a nation at war than they were during the last World War, due to the increase of farm organizations. Co-operatives are helping farmers in their war effort by keeping the cost of feeds, fertilizers and other supplies from going too high; thereby, helping all farmers, especially the smaller farmers, to produce more for victory."

Hollingsworth's essay was written under the supervision of J. C. Warren, vocational agriculture teacher of Waynesville high school.

Winners up in the district contest were John Troy Meadows, of Marshall, William F. Osborne, of Waynesville, and Martha Grace Brindley, of Woodleaf. Each of these received a cash award.

This is the fifteenth year of the annual co-operative essay contest during this time, more than 400 rural high school boys and girls have written essays on subjects pertaining to more profitable farming.

The following counties were represented in this district: Alexander, Polk, Alleghany, Gaston, Rutherford, Graham, Ashe, Swain, Mitchell, Yancey, Mecklenburg, Yadkin, Caldwell, Clay, Wilkes, Watauga, Macon.

Wins In Contest

CARMEL HOLLINGSWORTH, a student of the Waynesville vocational agriculture class, won first place in the district essay contest, sponsored by the Cotton Cooperative of Raleigh.

Carmel Hollingsworth, of Waynesville, is this summer completing a course of study which gives him a chance to learn more about ways of marketing North Carolina farm produce profitably and at the same time to win a cash scholarship, the National Junior Vegetable Growers Association reports this week.

C. Hollingsworth Studying Ways Of Farm Marketing

He is competing with 12 other North Carolina youths for a $500 grand national prize as well as for a $250 regional award and 10 individual prizes of $100 each allotted to the Southern area from a $5,000 scholarship fund.

When big things are done in the Nation's Capital, North Carolinians help to do them. That goes for most anything, for Capitol Hill, the Federal Government and the armed services.

It was a Tar Heel, Controller General Lindsey C. Warren, who signed his name to the largest financial warrant "on the face of the earth," making it possible for Uncle Sam's army to begin spending the $42,820,003.067 recently appropriated by Congress. President Roosevelt signed the appropriation bill, but it took the signatures of Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau and finally Mr. Warren to make the money actually available to the War Department.

A noted North Carolina attorney, Colonel Kenneth Royall, of Goldsboro, is one of the two officers named by the President to serve as Defense Counsel for the trial of the saboteurs who were captured after having been put ashore in this country by German submarines. Colonel Royall is on active duty in the office of his old friend, Undersecretary of the War Robert P. Patterson. He formerly practiced law in Raleigh with former Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus.

While they are in Washington, the saboteurs are in custody of still another North Carolinian, Brig. Gen. Albert A. Cox, formerly of Raleigh, who is Provost Marshal of the District of Columbia.

Politics has taken a back seat since Pearl Harbor, but something happens occasionally to help keep the wheels of Democratic party machinery in motion. The Democratic National committee held a dinner last week at the Mayflower Hotel for southern congressmen.

C. C. McGinnis, of Raleigh, State WPA administrator, made a brief report on the current WPA program in North Carolina when he stopped off at the United States Capitol on his way to Chicago for a meeting of state WPA executives from all over the country.

"We have a lot of defense projects under way in the construction field," he said, "while in the non-construction field we are staffing civilian defense offices, sponsoring recreation programs for camps, maneuver and war industry areas, and conducting the child welfare program in the schools. An extensive gardening and canning program is now under way, the canned foods to be used for next winter's school lunches.

The administrator said a survey showed that during the past seven years WPA had constructed or aided in constructing 22 airports in 21 North Carolina cities, including two at Elizabeth City, one of which is used by the coast guard.

"The significant thing is the number of these airports now being utilized by the army and navy," he said. "The army would never have gone to Goldsboro unless the airport there had been ready. The

On The Tar Heel Front IN WASHINGTON

By Robert A. Erwin and Frances McKusick

The Office of Petroleum Coordinator is trying to work out a plan to equalize the supply of gasoline between the North Carolina and Tennessee sections of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, according to Representative Zebulon Weaver. Nothing definite has yet been done to relieve the rationing situation on the North Carolina side of the park, but the Congressman is leaving no stone unturned to find a solution.

Remaining in Washington over the Fourth of July, he declared that "our one big job now is to whip Hitler and to quit grousing about every little thing on the face of the earth. Some one has to lay down the law to us, and undoubtedly that isn't any more pleasant for the officials who do it than for the people who are governed by their regulations. What we need is a greater and more serious war effort."

Registrants of the fifth registration under the selective draft service will be given their serial and order numbers on the basis of their birth dates, it has been announced by the local draft board.

There will be no national lottery in Washington to determine the order numbers of the men who registered on June 30th, as in other registrations. The local board has been ordered to arrange the registration cards of registrants in a pile according to their respective dates of birth so that the cards of registrants born on January 2, 1922, will follow the cards of those born on January 1, 1922, and so on to the bottom of the pile where those born on June 30, 1923, will be located.

When the local board has cards for two or more registrants born on the same date, such cards shall be arranged in alphabetical order.

Serial numbers will be assigned to the registrants so that the registrant whose card heads the list will be serial number one. The registrant whose card is second from the top gets serial number two, and so on through the list. The registrant with serial number one will then be given the next available order number in his local board.

By placing registrants of the fifth registration at the end of the lists of previously issued order numbers, national headquarters point out that classification of the 20-year-olds who registered on June 30 is not expected to begin until classification of previously registered men of military age has been completed.

Classification of the 18 and 19-year-olds who registered on June 30, will be withheld until they reach the age of military liability, the local board pointed out.

CARS

The 34,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States, serving 130,000,000 people, are riding themselves off the road at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent a month.
