

The Kind Of Government America Deserves Now And In The Future Is Up to The American Voter---

President Roosevelt Said:

In his speech to the International Student Assembly in Washington, September 3, 1942

"The better world for which you fight—and for which some of you give your lives—will not come merely because we shall have won the war. It will not come merely because we wish very hard that it will come. It will be made possible only by bold vision, intelligent planning and hard work . . .

"In the concept of the Four Freedoms, in the basic principles of the Atlantic Charter, we have set for ourselves high goals, unlimited objectives.

"These concepts and these principles are designed to form a world in which men, women and children can live in freedom and in equity, and, above all, without fear of the horrors of war. For no soldiers or sailors, in any of our forces today, would so willingly endure the rigors of battle if they thought that in another twenty years their own sons would be fighting still another war on distant deserts or seas or in faraway jungles or skies.

"We have profited by our past mistakes. This time we shall know how to make full use of victory."

It is important at this time that the President and Congress have the continued support of the State, County and local Democratic Administrations.

We should not be lulled to sleep by the Republican friends saying that what we do locally will not make any difference.

North Carolina and Haywood County make up a unit of the government that shapes the policies of the United States and directs the destiny of this country.

Some of the men and women elected to Congress this fall may still be in office when the war is over and the time comes to write the peace and make full use of the victory we have won. It is extremely important that they be wise leaders—that they be intelligent and open-minded statesmen with a world viewpoint, who will be sympathetic with and work for the great goals which have been set.

Under present conditions, we must face facts. One of these facts, disagreeable as it may be to our Republican friends, is that whenever the House of Representatives or the Senate has been of a different political faith from that of the Chief Executive, there is nothing but chaos and confusion in the machinery of government. The successful prosecution of the war demands that nothing like this should result from this November election.

Most of the Republican leaders have for many years advocated a foreign policy completely out of line with the best interests of the country. This began during the first World War when the foreign policy of the Republican leaders consisted chiefly in opposing anything advocated by Woodrow Wilson, regardless of its merits.

They rejected every form of international co-operation, they defeated the League of Nations and adopted a strictly isolationist policy.

When the Harding administration came into power, it called a naval disarmament conference and sunk a substantial part of the American fleet in exchange for a promise from the Japanese and other governments that they would not resort to war. This was followed by a policy of starving the Army and Navy during the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover administrations.
