

Miss Martha Gray Moore Becomes Bride Of John E. Morgan On 29th

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Martha Gray Moore, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Moore, of Bethel to John Edwin Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Morgan, of Canton, which took place on Saturday afternoon, January 30, at the Bethel Methodist church, with the Rev. R. Thomas Hauts, Jr., pronouncing the vows.

Banks of hemlock and mountain greens were arranged on the sides of the chancel, graduating in height to the center and illuminated by tall candelabra bearing lighted cathedral tapers. On either side of the altar tall baskets of giant white snapdragons and gladioli were arranged in front of the greenery, making an artistic background for the ceremony.

Prior to the taking of the vows, Mrs. Thomas Hauts played Adagio, "Moonlight Sonata," by Beethoven, "To a Wild Rose," by McDowell, and during the ceremony she softly rendered, "I Love Thee," by Grieg. The traditional wedding march from Lohengrin by Wagner was used for the processional and the march from "Midsummer Nights Dream," by Mendelssohn was played as the recessional.

The bridal couple entered the church together, unattended. The bride had chosen for her marriage an original model of winter-white wool in street length, with self-applique, with which she wore a halo turban, fashioned entirely of plush-pink flowers, with a shoulder length mist-like veil. The bride's bouquet was of pink rose buds and cycloglossum.

Mrs. Morgan is the granddaughter of Mrs. J. W. Moore and the late James W. Moore of Bethel. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Joseph Killian Cathey and the late Mrs. Augusta Ratchiff Cathey. She received her education at Bethel high school and Brevard college. What Was The Decision Of Mr. and Mrs. Ground Hog?

of blue sky she now gazes into the sun in fury of lowering clouds intent upon the duty in hand. No coquette can ever match the fickleness of Mother Nature and Mrs. Ground Hog goes back to her lord and master with down-cast mien. What shall she tell him? Then an inspiration smacks her right between the eyes of comprehension. He has no right to put the burden of decision on her shoulders; it is his tradition, not hers. He gets all the credit when he is right; he is referred to as the Forecaster Supreme and he never tells the world that he has sent his wife out first to determine conditions. All of a sudden, she emancipates herself; she is through being his go-ahead-of any longer. She has found herself after all these years, and she isn't going to lose any time in letting him realize that fact. Perhaps, who knows with conditions as they are, she will do the Big Work herself next year.

Head held high, she walks into Mr. Ground Hog's bedroom and announces that this is one time he is going to make his own decision. "And you'd better be up and getting out," she tells him, "it is one minute of eleven and you are due at eleven when the whole world looks to you for the weather conditions for the next six weeks. Get going."

Surprised beyond expression at the sudden turn of affairs, Mr. Ground Hog hurriedly arises and dresses in his best bib and tucker, preparatory to his great adventure. He holds himself erect, opens the door and steps out into the world just as the big clock strikes the hour of eleven.

What did Mr. Ground Hog find waiting for him? Has he gone back to his warm, comfortable bed for another six-week's snooze; or has he gone back, a penitent forecaster, and asked Mrs. Ground Hog to come out into the Great Open, for Spring is beckoning?
