Allen's History Of State Goes Into 2nd Edition

W. C. Allen's History of North Carolina, widely used school book, is now being reprinted for its second edition. Mr. Allen stated Monday that the first edition, which came out in October, 1942, has been exhausted, and he has closed a contract with the printers to begin the printing of the second edition.

To meet the increasing demand, the printers say they will rush the order the best that war time conditions will permit so as to have the edition ready some time in August if possible.

The author, W. C. Allen, well known educator in Haywood county, has been made general sales manager for the Dixie Press of Raleigh, owners. He has traveled in the interest of this book into 83 of the counties of the State and into all the cities and large towns.

Mr. Allen says that his efforts to extend the use of his book has met with good success, and he hopes to have them used in every county in the State in the next year.

-TIMELY- Farm Questions and Answers

Question: Does shallow cultivation of corn pay?

Answer: Yes, say Extension agronomists at State College. They suggest that you pick up a handful of soil behind your cultivator and, if the soil is full of broken roots, cultivate more shallow. The plant needs its roots for obtaining moisture and fertilizer and it cannot stand up straight, if the side roots are cut. Barring off, or ridging with a turning plow, will usually destroy so many roots as to be definitely harmful. The agronomists suggest that you do not cultivate your corn after it begins to tassle.

Question: Must one have clay soils to produce alfalfa successfully?

Answer: No. Experimental tests and farm experience have shown that it can be grown in all sections of North Carolina. Seeding dates vary for the different sections and it is very important that the crop be sown at the right time. The soil should be tested to determine its lime requirement and preparations should be made in advance of the seeding of the crop. State College agronomists suggest that you disk the land 4 to 6 weeks before seeding and that as much vegetation be left on the surface of the soil as possible. This helps to prevent the soil from baking and helps in getting a good stand. Ask your county agent for War Series Bulletin No. 21 or request this publication from the Agricultural Editor, State College, Raleigh.

Question: What is a good crop to grow after corn in the mountains?

Answer: Broadcast about 15 pounds of Crimson Clover and 15 pounds of Italian rye grass per acre at the last cultivation of the corn, suggest the Extension specialists at State College. This will give the best of grazing and good growth for soil improvement. They also suggest that this mixture can be sown after early harvested Irish potatoes and between cabbage rows.

Cpl. Holt Given Distinguished Flying Citation

Cpl. Richlyn H. Holt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Holt of Waynesville, is a member of a Liberator group which has been awarded a Presidential citation for the lowlevel attack on the Plosta oil fields last August. Thus he is authorized to wear the Distinguished Unit Badge awarded each man with the group at the time of the mission.

Cpl. Holt is now serving as an aircraft turret technician with his group which has flown over Libya, Sicily, Italy, France, Germany and the Balkans. One of the oldest bombardment outfits overseas, it helped rout Rommel in North Africa and is now operating from an Italian base.

Before entering the service in July, 1942, Cpl. Holt was employed by the Hall Smith Construction Co., Palm Beach, Fla. He has been overseas 16 months.
