

The Ramparts of Peace

TO early Western North Carolinians, the only ramparts of peace were the bounties of nature in a prosperous mood—the things that the good earth gave

These ramparts your forefathers guarded with theolute determination of free and independent pioneers. Today your ramparts of peace are agriculture and industry—dedicated to all-year production and employment.

Industry like Dayton Rubber for example, whose technicians over the years have sought endlessly for new improvements in natural and synthetic rubber products which would make the vision of stabilized employment a reality.

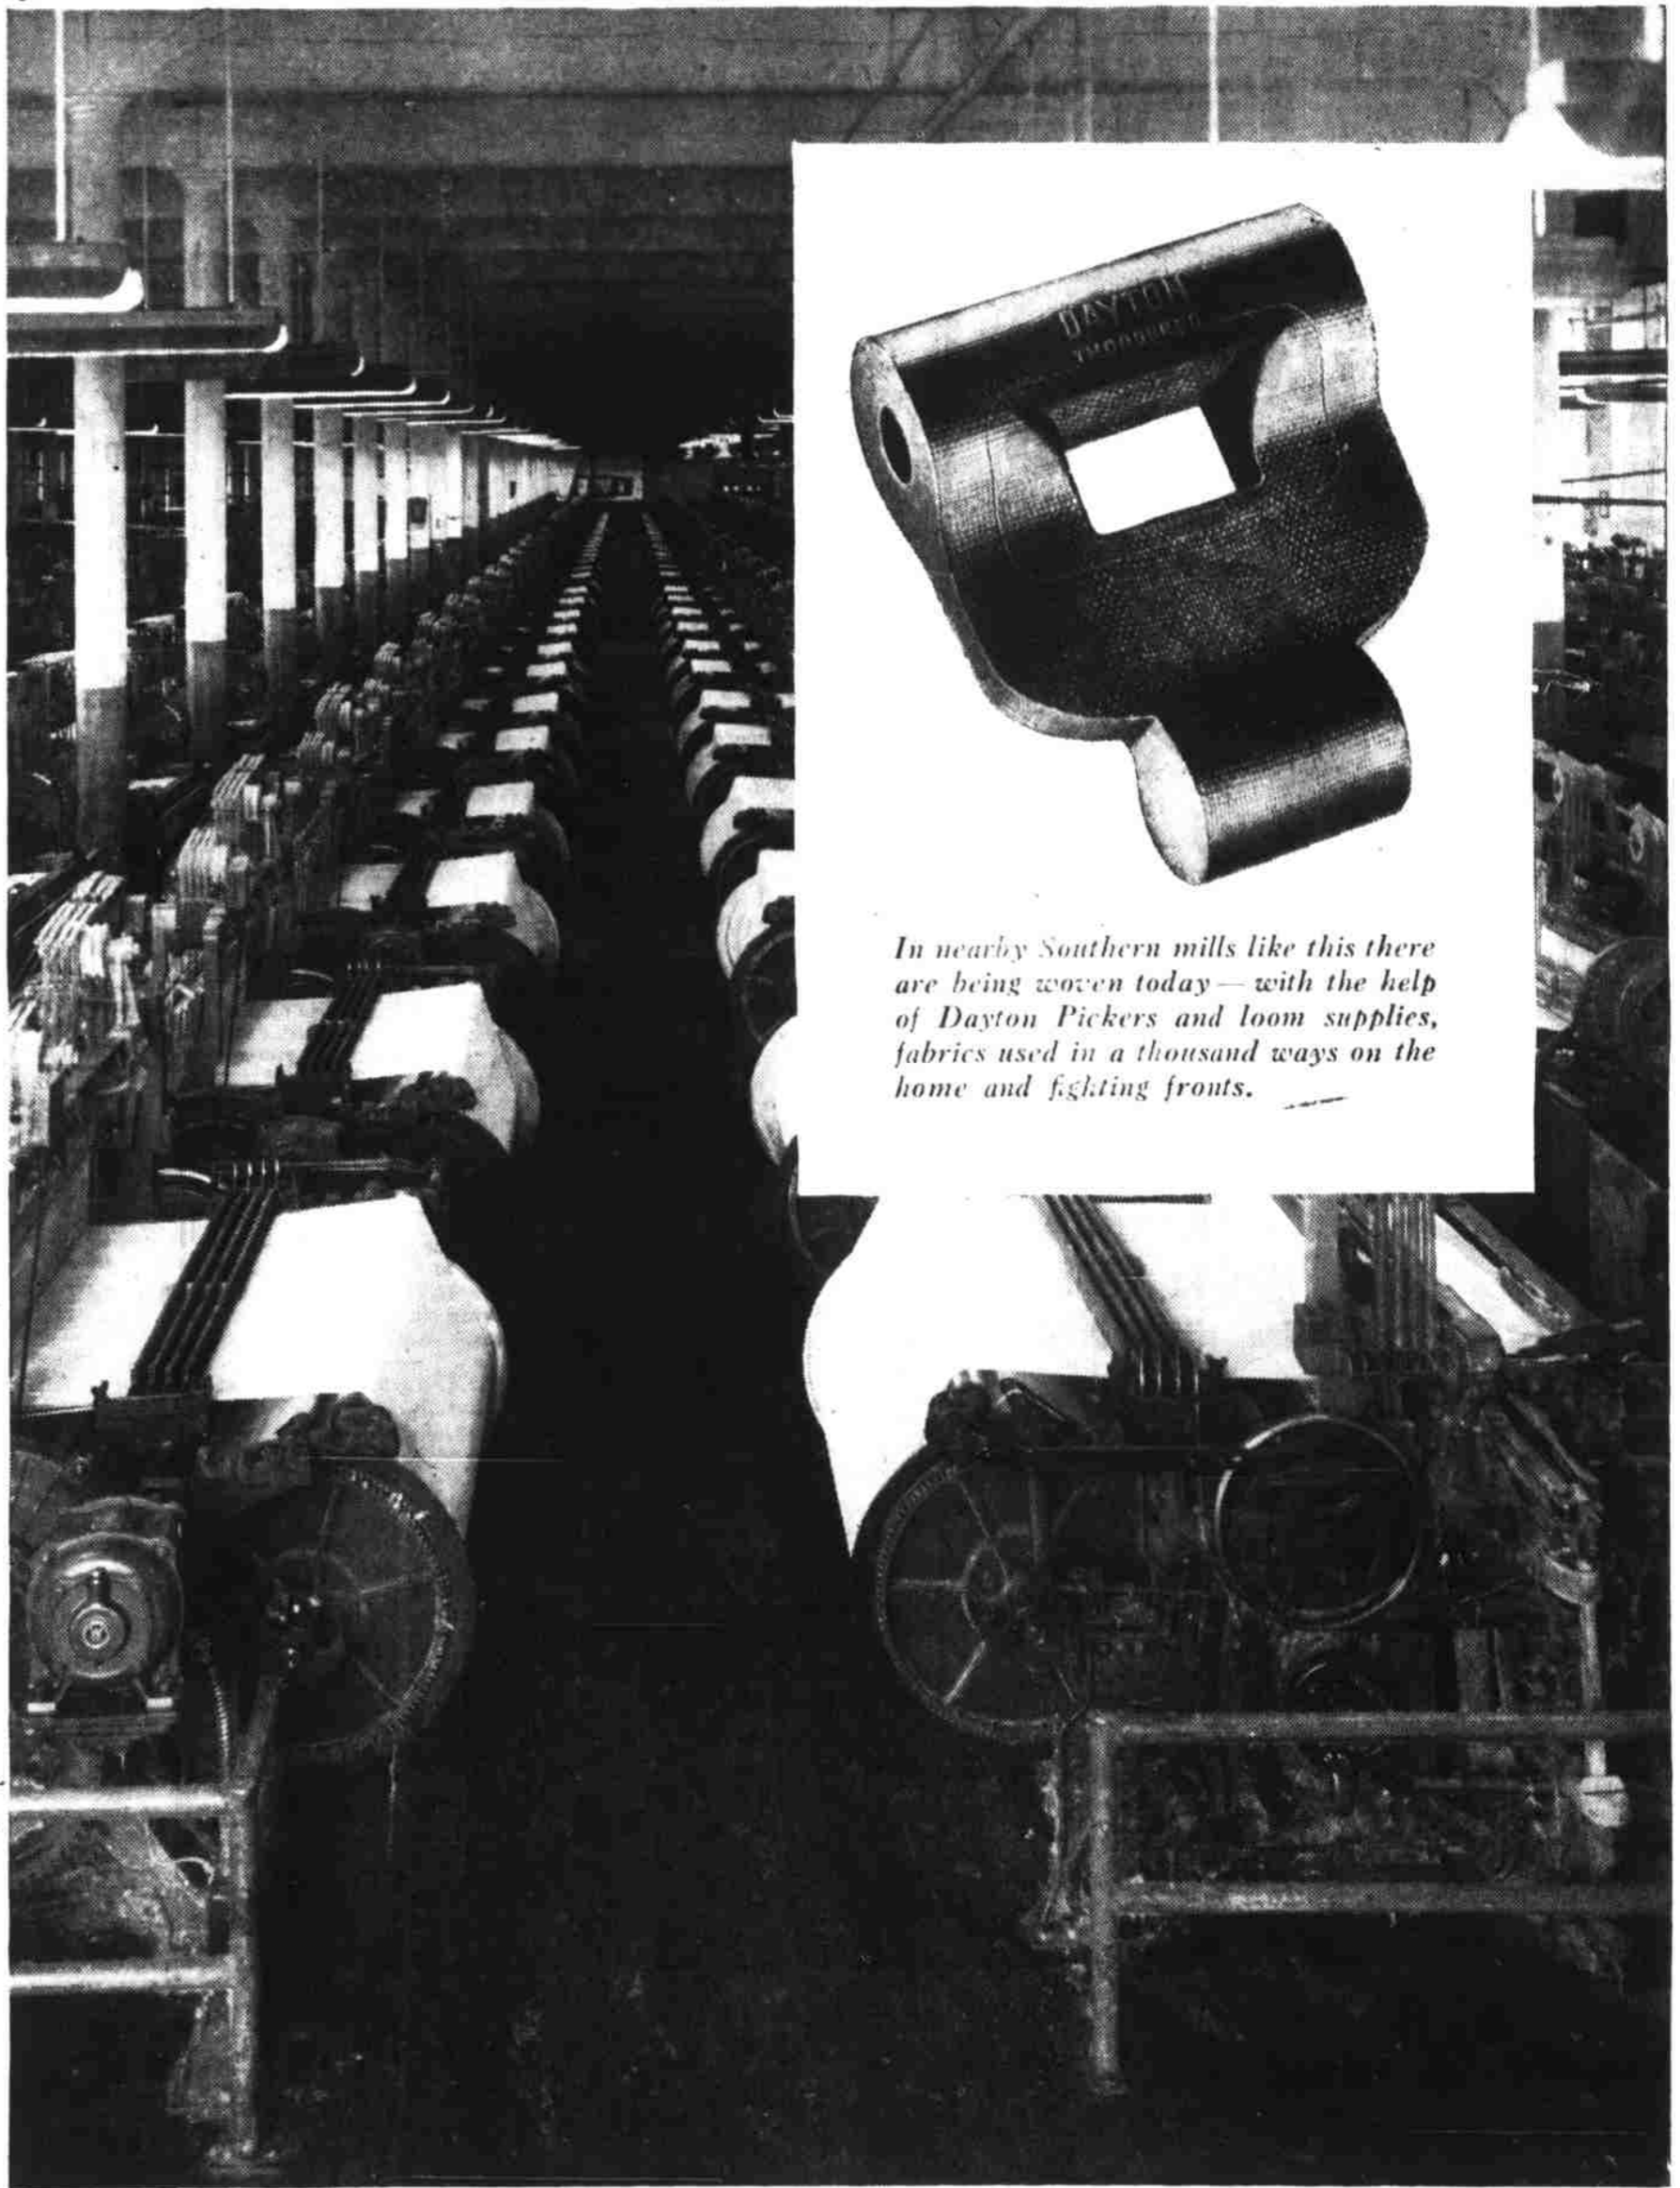

The search has been endless and the way has not been easy. It took vision and courage to build here four years ago—the first plant in America exclusively designed and built for the manufacture of goods from synthetic rubber. And it will take foresighted planning and patient research by Dayton Technicians to keep ferreting out and developing new and more useful products of Technical Excellence in synthetic rubber.

These are the ramparts of peace over which we shall stand with your continued help.

It will be a difficult and trying task for Dayton to continue from its present manufacture of such products as tires and Oxygen Hose for our Armed Forces to continuing peacetime products which will serve the great textile industry located nearby.

Let it's a task which will be accomplished if you, the smart, independent people of this community, join your efforts with ours in guarding the ramparts of peacetime production and employment—for the common good of our great community.

KEEP BACKING OUR INVADING AMERICANS WITH WAR BONDS

In nearby Southern mills like this there are being woven today—with the help of Dayton Pickers and loom supplies, fabrics used in a thousand ways on the home and fighting fronts.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF PATIENT RESEARCH

Twenty-five years ago Dayton Rubber began its continuing search for inventions and improvements in mechanical rubber products. That search will never end because its purpose is to ferret out new and better products which will make possible all-year production and employment for the people of Dayton Rubber.
